TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS AND EASELS

Some of our gadgets may come to you now in plain wire, because we cannot secure materials to give them that bright gold finish. They do the work just as well and many prefer them in their plain dress.

WE PAY ALL POSTAGE TO YOU. ARTICLES OF THE SAME PRICE MAY BE ASSORTED.

Dealers Attention!

Over 2000 Dealers handle these gadgets.

On orders of $5.00 or more we allow liberal discount.

Write for Price List.

TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS

REGULAR HANGERS, 7-11 Inch A simple little thing made of galvanized wire and a spring. Nothing exposed on front but four little tips of wire. Fits almost all plates. Can be cut down to fit real small ones but will not hold anything larger than 11 inches. A Hanger you can easily apply, and once applied, can instantly remove—on and off when desired.

Over Half Million Sold.

it costs us almost as much to mail one as for ten, hence the variation in price.

CUP PLATE HANGERS AND REGULAR HANGERS CUT DOWN to special order, 25c each.

LARGE HANGERS For plaques, platters, etc. Same as our Regular but of larger (galvanized) wire and spring. Be sure to state size wanted, or send us paper pattern.

OUR HEAVY, STURDY EASELS

Medium Size Plate Easel Holds either saucer, plate or small platter. Heavy smooth wire, gilt finish, soldered one piece, up on legs, will not rock. Lasts a lifetime.

Large Cup and Saucer Easel A big sturdy easel. Heavy twisted wire. Holds all large cups and saucers. It gets the job done.

Demi-Tasse Cup and Saucer Easel Made of twisted wire. Takes up no more room than sitting in saucer. Makes cup and saucer collections more attractive. A big seller.

THE HEIDE COLLECTION OF PIPES AND OTHER TOBACCO USING IMPLEMENTS AND ACCESSORIES

is offered FOR SALE as a whole, at inventoried cost. It will probably prove the last comprehensive collection to be liquidated. Assembled during the past forty-seven years, such a collection cannot hereafter be duplicated.

The owner collected the specimens during extensive travels since 1900 and through agents in all parts of the world.

A section is devoted to type specimens of the use of narcotics; opium, hashish and betel nut. An outstanding set is an opium smoking pipe and accessories, entirely of beautifully matched jade.

A corollary library of some 1300 titles, practically all "first editions," constitutes a select nucleus of the 4,000 titles listed in Arents bibliography.

AFRICAN CHIEFTAIN PIPES

Two massive native pipes from the French Cameroons, entirely brass, lengths 38 and 42 inches. The upper pipe with an elaborate cover, has three bird heads serving as handles. The lower pipe, uncovered, has a native head full round at the front, and heads of water-buck in low relief around the crown of the bowl. The pipe rests on a native version of a tiger's head, cast full round. The stem is decorated with heads of water buffalo in high relief. It is not uncommon for these African pipes to consume a half-pound of tobacco at one charge.

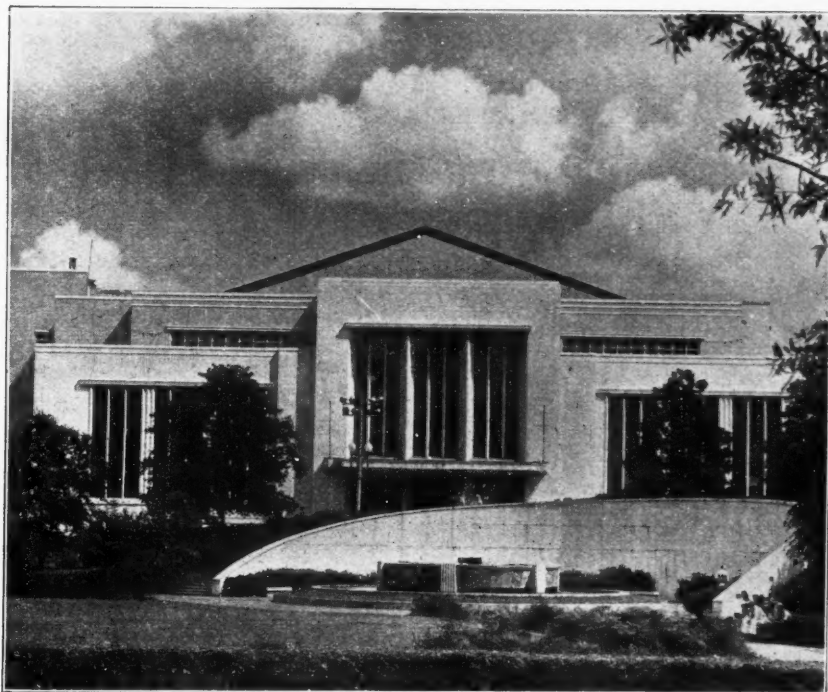

A few of the outstanding items in the collection: A pipe, 4,000 years old, found in the seventh stratum near Boonville, Mo., 2,500 years older than earliest mound pipe. Aztec silver pipe. Meerschams, from the earliest commercial effort (Iffert 1765) through the chased silver mounted pipe of Franz Joseph, of Austria, to the artistic gem, "Pan and the Nayads," after Bouguereau. Pipe owned successively by Maximilian, Ludwig I, and Ludwig II, of Bavaria, Pipe & snuff box of Tzu-Hsi, Empress Dowager of China.

While American Indians are amply represented, from the Queen Charlotte islands of the Northwest to Florida, the collection is richest in its unmatched material from the Eskimos and the Mongolians: China, Manchuria, Korea, Indo China, Siam, Japan and Formosa.

"MUST" BOOKS

FOR COLLECTORS AND STUDENTS OF EARLY AMERICAN GLASS

By RUTH WEBB LEE

On Hand now, at long last!

EARLY AMERICAN PRESSED GLASS. (Revised and enlarged, 1946). Reference book in general use by libraries, because it is the only one dealing entirely with American pattern glass, collectible in sets of tableware. Thousands of forms illustrated. 666 pages. 195 plates. 21st edition. $10.00

HANDBOOK OF EARLY AMERICAN PRESSED GLASS PATTERNS. 1936, Revised 1946. Twelfth large printing. Handy pocket guide designed to enable collectors to identify glass patterns. It contains all of the illustrations in Early American Pressed Glass but not the text. 212 pages. $2.00

VICTORIAN GLASS. Specialties of the 19th century, including between two and three hundred patterns not shown in Early American Pressed Glass, as well as numerous novelties, such as about 500 glass hats, 500 glass slippers, 400 vases, match holder, animal dishes, etc. 1945. 608 pages, 264 plates. 6th edition. $10.00

HANDBOOK OF VICTORIAN GLASS. 1946. All the illustrations in Victorian Glass but not the text. 275 pages. $2.00

SANDWICH GLASS. A completely revised and enlarged volume will be ready early in 1947. Added will be notes taken from the records (in my possession) of all the meetings of the Boston & Sandwich Glass Company, from the date of its inception until it closed out, as well as additional illustrations. This will be the most authoritative history of any glass company in American, as documented by a complete set of records. You will want this handsome volume. Publication date will be announced later. $10.00

HANDBOOK OF SANDWICH GLASS. 1946. First edition will be ready late this fall. Delay has been caused by non-arrival of the paper. $2.00

ANTIQUE FAKES AND REPRODUCTIONS. Fifth edition, revised and greatly enlarged, will be available early in 1947. Price will be announced when the book is released.

2515

Remember That we were the ONLY concern that made regular deliveries of furniture trim and accessories all during the trying war years. This was due, in part, to the fact of owning the major portion of the old Sack, Inc. pre-war stock. Now that conditions are somewhat easing up we are far better able to serve your needs in this field.

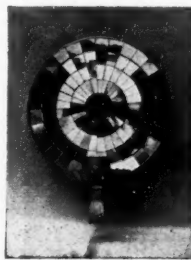

Our fully illustrated catalogues are NOW AVAILABLE to all antique dealers, decorators, architects and builders who will receive a copy Free of Charge provided that a request is made upon business stationery. A 50c charge will otherwise be made. This is pre-payable in either postage stamps or coin.

THE HEIDE PIPE COLLECTION

(See Cover)

SINCE the dispersion of the Bragge collection, about 1880, perhaps the most comprehensive private collection of pipes and other tobacco-using implements and accessories is that of John F. H. Heide, of Chicago. He has traveled extensively and, with the help of agents everywhere, seems to have succeeded in bringing together, between the years 1900 and 1941, types of the finest craftsmanship the races of man have produced in the service of Lady Nicotine. The Heide collection includes pipes from 2000 B. C. (2500 years prior to the earliest mound pipes) to the present day. It is a brilliant ethnological display, rich in folklore and historical interest.

Our front cover illustrates a few of the specimens more or less suitable for group photography. Though the African section, snuff boxes, narcotics, and the library are not included, the picture is suggestive of the plane on which the collection is built. The accompanying chart, together with the following descriptions, explain the various pipes illustrated.

1. Alaskan Eskimo walrus ivory tobacco pipe, uniquely interwoven seals, carved, 17¼" long; from King Island, Bering Strait, about 1850.

2. Alaskan Eskimo walrus ivory "record pipe" with four longitudinal strips on which the smoker's voyages, whale and walrus hunts, home life, and visits from sea-going vessels, are incised with striking fidelity. Half of one strip is blank, suggesting the likelihood of the man's death in some adventure, for these records were usually completed though it took a lifetime. The bowl, of similar ivory, is mortised into the heavy end, with a bone mouthpiece at the other; 14" long. Obtained by Carl Hagenbeck in Kotzebue Sound, about 1890. Eight "record pipes" of various sizes, are included in the collection.

3. Jadeite totemic pipe, a "raven-fish," made up of many grotesque figures, masks and animals, deftly carved and undercut to reduce weight;

11½x2¼x¼". From the Theimshian tribe of the Haida Indians, Queen Charlotte Islands, B. C., about 1850.

4. "Pan and the Naiads," a full round carving, after Bouguereau. Meerschmum carving came to its zenith in this gem of art about 1875 and then quickly declined. The pipe from Vienna, is 9¼" long, including a 4¼" rock amber mouthpiece, 3¼" high at bowl.

5. Extraordinary silver-mounted calabash pipe, with rock meerschmum inner bowl, and remarkable 4¼" rock amber mouthpiece; hallmarked, England, about 1890.

6. Curved stem portrait pipe of Rudyard Kipling, an excellent likeness of him as a young man; he is shown smoking a diminutive pipe from which smoke issues when the larger pipe is working. Made of Mediterranean brier, with hard-rubber bit; 6½" over-all. English made, about 1900.

7. Tyrolean mountaineer's festival pipe, carved, in excellent detail, to show hunting scene in relief, with full round owl's head at front bottom of pipehead; horizontal, lizard-skin covered stem, with drain at middle. Swiss, about 1870.

8. Pratt Biscuit-ware "puzzle pipe"; such pipes were the masterpieces of ambitious journeymen, closing their apprenticeship. The specimen is exceptional for its beauty, symmetry and balance; three principal coils and ten minor loops, in polychrome; 14" long, 6" high. England, about 1790.

9. Japanese wrestler's silver tobacco pipe, 13½" long, 18 ounce, inlaid with gold, copper, and shakudo metal; representing a hawk pursuing sparrows through branches of a pine tree, carved in exquisite detail, symbolic of the user's own boasted achievements. As these men weigh upward of 300 pounds, their implements are appropriately massive. Japan, about 1850.

10. Japanese lady's gold tobacco pipe, used by the nobility, the women of successful industrialists, and popular geisha with a taste for ostentation; 20 karat gold mouthpiece and bowl, richly carved floral design; mottled bamboo stem; 7¼" overall. Japan, 1860-1875.

11. Mikado's tobacco pipe, made by Minakuchi Gombai, in 1577, some 30 years before smoking was generally introduced in that country. It is signed by the artist and bears the Mikado's kirimon (crest), three drooping leaves surmounted by three flowers, with seven blossoms on the central spray and five blossoms on the others. The stem is bamboo, with tapering silver ends, and 20 karat gold mouthpiece.

12. Royal Chinese dry tobacco pipe, made of rattan root, knarled with lateral roots which form loops by returning to the main root. It was found in the chamber of the Dowager Empress Tzu-Hsi, in the imperial palace of Peking, during the Boxer rebellion of 1900. It was made during the Ming dynasty before 1644. Such natural root pipes are highly prized for their curative and protective properties. The bowl is silver lined; ivory mouthpiece; 13¼" long.

13. Mongolian chieftain's dry tobacco pipe. The stem is an eagle's wing bone, mounted at both ends, with pak-tong, brass and copper; red rhodonite set into the bowl end; 15½" overall. 17th century.

14. Inventor's model, with multiple aluminum smoke channels in series, equivalent to a stem 67" long, for a cooler smoke; a drain under the brier bowl admits of cleaning that portion only; length 9" overall. This pipe was made in Chicago, 1899, by a machinist, and left with him by the inventor, in lieu of $350 payment.

15. Scandinavian boxwood pipehead, in form of a lion rampant, holding a globe; the hinged head forming the lid, with smoke vent through the mouth; ivory eyes and teeth; baked clay lined; silver mounted; 6" high. Unique specimen, about 1820.

16. The famed "Three Kings Pipe," given by Maximilian, of Bavaria, to his son Ludwig I, in his school years, for whom Lola Montez may on occasions have stuffed it; later inherited by Ludwig II, the so-called mad king, who lost his life in the Tegernsee; ornately carved in pear-tree wood; with stem of weichsel and deer horn, in sections separated by silver bands; horn socket and mouthpiece; the whole secured with a double silver chain; 13" long. Bavaria, about 1804.

17. Swedish, steel mounted, flattened, oak pipehead, carved on one side with a grape vine, and on the other side with an oak twig; stainless steel of fine craftsmanship; 4½" high, 8½" overall. About 1825.

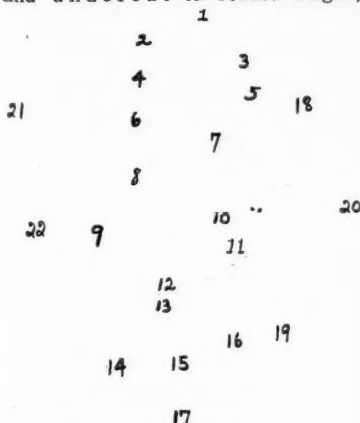

18. Ojibway Catlinite bundle pipe, from Loon clan; dark pipestone; full round carving of a loon, with totem figure under its bill; 25" overall.

19. Kickapoo Catlinite tomahawk pipe, with acorn shaped bowl, and nicely tapered blade; 19" overall.

20. Persian, long dry tobacco pipe, red baked clay bowl; amber mouthpiece, with enameled gold and copper ring; cork-wood stem in three sections, the central section wrapped with red silk and gold tinsel thread in geometric pattern, with tassel; length 49".

21. Japanese, 17th century steel household pipe, made in three sections, so as to fit into the drawer of a tobacco box (smoking cabinet); with copper inlays of the kirimon in each section—the insignia of the Mikado's household having three drooping leaves surmounted with three flowers, but with five and three blossoms instead of the seven and five blossoms of the Mikado's kirimon, described under No. 11. The pipe is incised with vines and foliage; tapered at both ends largest diameter ½" at center; length 28½" overall.

22. Arabian shisha, or narghile, of the 18th century, an erect tall pipe on a tripod; the tall stem of wood entirely encased in silver, in overlapping scales, culminating in an overhanging bell, from which 15 silver fish are suspended, is inserted in an ornately grilled and enameled water bowl, which is pilastered below and socketed in the tripod. The brass pipehead, pottery lined, is decorated with hanging chains; height 41½".

BARNUM COLLECTION AT TUFTS

By A. MORTON SMITH

Perhaps no name of an individual has become so inseparably associated with the circus in the minds of the American people than that of the late Phineas Taylor Barnum, internationally famous showman of the nineteenth century.

And this association is being preserved in an adequate and interesting manner in the Barnum museum at Tufts college, Medford, Mass., through a collection of Barnumiana, liberally sprinkled with souvenirs of the circus that bore his name.

Barnum himself, started the museum back in 1883. One of the original trustees of the college, his idea was to create a collection of stuffed specimens of animal life, but through the activity of Dr. Russell I. Carpenter, professor of biology and curator of the college's Barnum-collection, a variety of Barnum items has been assembled.

Curiously enough, Barnum never achieved fame in circus business as is popularly believed. He made no important contribution to circus history and was never actively engaged in the management of a traveling circus bearing his name.

In fact, he frowned upon the first effort of a circus man to capitalize on his name, and when he was left with a large circus on his hands on two occasions, he called in rivals to operate it.

Barnum's only direct experience in the circus field was as treasurer of Aaron Turner's circus in 1836, soon after he had cast his lot with show business.

It seems that as a young man, operating a small grocery store in New York, he learned of a negress in Philadelphia reputed to be 161 years old and the childhood nurse of George Washington.

Barnum investigated, and was so impressed he sold his store, borrowed $500 and bought the negress, Joice Heth for $1,000. In the first week he exhibited her, he made the purchase price and demonstrated his flair for ballyhoo and publicity which played such an important part in his success as a showman.

Barnum's first large venture was the purchase of the old American museum in New York, which he rechristened Barnum's American Museum and made it the talk of the town.

Seth B. Howes, a circus man of some stature, was the first to persuade Barnum to lend his name to a traveling museum and menagerie, known as Barnum's Asiatic Caravan, which toured for five years in the early 50's, exhibiting Tom Thumb, the famous midget, and a herd of 10 elephants imported from Ceylon. L. B. Lent was the manager of this enterprise.

Barnum's name was next attached to the Barnum and Van Amburgh Museum and Menagerie, which took the road in 1867. While Barnum was listed as "general manager," he took no part in its operation, except in a permanent building in which it was exhibited during the winter months in New York.

Barnum, past 60, was living in retirement in Bridgeport, when W. C. Coup approached him with a plan of putting a large circus on the road to be known as P. T. Barnum's Museum, Menagerie and Circus. Barnum opposed the venture at first, but yielded to Coup's persuasion, and finally invested some money and equipment in the show.

It was a success from the start and after one year as a wagon show, was placed on 61 railroad-owned cars in 1872, to become the first big railroad circus. Later in the season, show-owned cars were used, the first in history.

When the New York Hippodrome was built in 1875, the show opened there as P. T. Barnum's Great Roman Hippodrome, and took to the road under that title. Barnum permitted John V. (Pogie) O'Brien to use the old title, P. T. Barnum's Great Traveling Exposition and World's Fair, for his show during the 1874 and 1875 seasons. Thus there were two Barnum shows on the road.

This was a great mistake, as competitors advertised "Barnum's Show Divided," with disastrous effect. Disgusted, Coup dissolved the partnership and Barnum called in competitors, "The Flatfoots," a circus syndicate composed of George F. Bailey, Avery Smith, J. J. Nathans and James June to operate the show. They dictated harsh terms and conducted the show until 1880 when they retired.

Again Barnum required astute circus men to operate the show bearing his name and James A. Bailey was persuaded to enter a partnership and direct the enterprise. After Bailey's death in 1906, the show went to the Ringling Brothers.

One of Barnum's great attractions was the largest elephant in captivity, Jumbo, which arrived in this country in April, 1882, after an extensive international publicity campaign. When Jumbo was killed by a locomotive three years later, Barnum had the hide stuffed and sent to the museum he had established at Tufts two years previously.

Jumbo is the most impressive collection piece in the museum, but there are many printed souvenirs, reminiscent of the publicity accorded the elephant including Jumbo cards given away with the purchase of thread in the 80's, heralds and couriers picturing and describing the huge pachyderm, and a number of letters Barnum wrote to college authorities, including many relating to the display of Jumbo.

A bust of Barnum stands on a pedestal in an alcove and personal effects preserved in the museum room include a scrapbook of newspaper clippings he meticulously arranged, his own autograph collection, and a walnut desk he designed and used when he started his first business venture at the age of 20 in his home town of Bethel.

There are circus tickets of the 70's, rare drawings of Jenny Lind and Tom Thumb, and Barnum's handwritten account of the death of Jumbo.

The collection is still growing, for quite frequently descendants of the showman and circus lovers in various parts of the world contribute items which have to do with the life of the noted character of the amusement world.

Metropolitan's 75th Anniversary

The Metropolitan Museum of Art recreated some of its own history for the observance of its 75th anniversary. It arranged a special exhibition called "The Taste of the Seventies," and featured a collection of old masters purchased in 1871.

There are a number of pictures owned by the museum in this group, noted for their fine and enduring quality. The foremost is perhaps Frans Hals' picturesque portrait of Malle Babbe (Crazy Barbara), the Witch of Haarlem; Jordans' Visit of St. John to the Infant Jesus; van Heemskerck's severe portrait of his father; de Gelder's Portrait of a Man in Half-armor; van der Heyden's sensitive, detailed Quay at Leyden; a pair of sturdy Fyt still lifes; and Tiepolo's brilliant Investiture of Bishop Harold.

Of the paintings of their own time which New Yorkers cherished 75 years ago, many still excite admiration, and others which brought a glint to the eyes in 1871 arouse a reminiscent sigh in 1946. Rosa Bonheur's colorful Horse Fair, Bonnat's portrait of the Museum's first president, John Taylor Johnston, Sully's Queen Victoria and Eastman Johnson's delightful Hatch Family are notable today for their fine painting as well as for their subjects.

Among the dreams of fair women that old New Yorkers will find familiar are Winterhalter's group of Florida and her lightly-draped friends, Pierre Cot's Storm, Merle's Falling Leaves, Fagnani's Muses, Max's Last Token. Mercy's Dream, a swooping figment of the imagination of Daniel Huntington, and the visionary Joan of Arc by Bastien-Lepage further sentimentalize the period.

To give the proper setting the Museum hung these paintings just the way they were hung in 1871—piled high on every wall. The idea of display then was not to space paintings graciously at eye level, but to hang them high and hang them low in true Victorian tradition.

Needlework Display

A panorama of needlework as carried on in Western New York from colonial days to the end of the Victorian era was recently in an exhibit of "Needlework Handicrafts" at the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, and has been arranged for the Needlework Club of the Rochester Museum Hobby Council.

That skill with the needle was an essential one, for all women in Colonial days, is shown in the case devoted to embroidery and stitching which displays examples of crewel work, eyelet embroidery, satin stitch and samplers. A striking piece is a gentleman's billfold brightly hued in green, yellow and pink with Florentine stitchery and lined with cambric. It was made for Isaac Farwell of Albion, N. Y., and bears the date, 1772.

Lace-making, including tatting, crocheting, and bobbin lace was another interest of housewives of the early 19th Century in Rochester. Suggestive of what the accomplished needleworker would use in the middle of the last Century is an elegant Chinese lacquer sewing table from Hong Kong presented to the mother of Mrs. William G. Weatherup of Rochester, in 1859.

Visitors are able to visualize the full process involved in the making of hooked rugs as well as knitting which was responsible for knitted lace, socks, pocket books, and other useful ladies equipment of the early period. Homemakers today will be interested to contrast the type of tableware, towels, and similar material which were all woven of homespun material in the farm homes of Western New York in the 40's, 50's, and 60's.

A highly developed and more sophisticated type of needlework which represented a vogue of the late Victorian period is needlepoint. The exhibit of needlepoint house slippers on a frame, pins, needles and thimbles represent the tools of a craft which was highly popular in Victorian homes.

The Museum exhibit was installed by Mrs. Elston Holton of the history division of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences. Mrs. Holton was also the organizer of the Genesee Valley Quilt Club.

Wisconsin Showplace

One of the show places of the country is Villa Louis in Prairie du Chien, Wis. It was built by Hercules Louis Dousman, a confidential agent of the American Fur Company, headed by Jacob Astor.

Dousman did well in his American frontier as his home attests, and his home was more luxurious than such famous homes as Mount Vernon, George Washington's home in Virginia; General Robert E. Lee's home in Arlington, Va., and the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson near Nashville, Tenn.

The Dousman home has rosewood furniture tufted in satins and velvets, Waterford chandeliers, Aubusson carpets, lace curtains and other finery.

New England Synagogue

Become Historic Site

One of the finest surviving examples of Colonial architecture in America, the historic Touro Synagogue of Newport, R. I., has been designated as a national historic site by the U. S. Department of the Interior.

This oldest surviving synagogue building in the country was designed by Peter Harrison, who designed King's Chapel in Boston and Christ Church at Cambridge.

Jews from Spain, Portugal, Holland and the West Indies who sought religious liberty in America settled in Newport as early as 1658.

The synagogue was dedicated in 1763. It is in excellent preservation today.

In 1790 George Washington visited the synagogue and wrote the congregation a letter on the American concept of religious liberty, concluding: "For happily the Government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens."

The National Park Service will not take over ownership of the building, but will provide professional assistance to preserve the historic site and interpret it to the public.

Memorial Plaque

At Courthill Smithy Keir, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, officials recently unveiled a memorial plaque to Kirkpatrick MacMillan, inventor of the pedal bicycle 107 years ago. The ceremony had been postponed from 1939, the centenary year, because of the war.

SOME NOTES ON THE DE LUCIA PHONOTYPES

Some months ago Jack L. Caidin of The Collectors Record Shop, New York City, was kind enough to lend me the only piece of sales literature put out by the manufacturers of the Phonotype Record that it has ever been my pleasure to inspect. Printed in Naples, Italy, where the company apparently had its headquarters, it was a list of celebrity recordings and about 90 per cent of its pages were given up to recordings by the celebrated tenor, Fernando de Lucia. Whether or not the list is complete, I do not know, but during the next few months it will appear, in parts, in the Historical Records section of this magazine, and trust that all owners of De Lucia Phonotypes will check their titles carefully with those on our list and report any that are missing from it. It is my hope that the list is complete, because it was printed after De Lucia's death (in his native city, Naples, February 23, 1925)—perhaps about 1926.

The other artists described as celebrities were Angeles Ottein, a coloratura soprano, and the baritones Pasquale Amato and Benvenuto Franci. There were also 11 titles by Comm. Giuseppe Godono, evidently a singer of small importance. On the back cover of the list was printed, in Italian of course, "For other records, see General Catalog."

Regarding the Amato Phonotypes, there is good reason to believe that they were actually recorded in Berlin, 1924, by Homochord. (See article Amato on Homochord and Phonotype Records, and list, page 20 of April, 1946, HOBBIES.) However, I know of no reason to suspect that the De Lucia, Ottein or Franci recordings originated anywhere but in Naples, or at least, in Italy. But perhaps some of our readers have information to the contrary?

The origin of the Phonotype Record has always seemed positively steeped in mystery; its history is no history at all, merely a collection of guesses and theories, so beware of all I have to say on the subject! For this lack of information, we collectors have only ourselves to blame, because not one of us, as far as I know, has taken the trouble to learn the truth. Or does any one of you possess the facts of the case? If so, please submit same for publication in this department!

To begin with, the name of this Italian brand is not Italian at all. Phonotype seems to be an English rendering of the Italian word Fonotipia, and I remember that during a trans-Atlantic discussion of the relative merits of De Lucia's Gramophone and Phonotype recordings, the English correspondent, who had obviously never seen or heard a Phonotype, thought his American colleague was talking about Fonotipia records (of which quite a number by De Lucia exist). But however similar the names, I do not believe there was any connection between the famous Societa Italiana di Fonotipia—Milano and the Neapolitan manufacturers of the Phonotype Record. But this does not explain why an Italian-made record should bear an English name.

As far as the De Lucia admirers are concerned, the crucial question about the Phonotypes is when they were made. The tenor's Fonotipia discs were definitely made before World War I, while the last of his recordings for the Gramophone Company was made about 1910. His Phonotypes could have been made prior to the war, perhaps, but somehow I feel they must have been made after 1918, but who knows? The quality of the voice seems somewhat less fresh than in the Gramophone recordings, but the breath control is no less extraordinary, and the vibrato is not as noticeable as it was earlier. In range, the voice seems more limited than it was, and many of his arias sound as though they were transposed downwards sometimes as much as a tone and a half (his beautifully sung A te, o cara from Puritani, for example), but until we know the speed at which the De Lucia Phonotypes were recorded we cannot say for certain in what key the aging tenor might have chosen to sing his arias. It is very likely that he resorted to transpositions often, for sensationally high notes were never for him, but on the other hand it is possible that an abnormal record speed might account for some of the reduction in pitch. The matter of tempi does not help us much, either, because De Lucia always had very individual ideas on this subject and in his old age he permitted himself to ignore markings of tempi and rhythm to an extraordinary degree, undoubtedly in order to display his astonishing continuity of breath to the utmost. Indeed, it is the very eccentricity of many of the Phonotype performances that leads me to think they must have been made towards the end of the singer's career. Perhaps it is this characteristic, too, (in addition to the fact that De Lucia is almost the only singer found on Phonotype in the U. S. A.) that gave rise to the theory that the Phonotype company was owned by Fernando himself. Certainly, judging from the vast number of titles he recorded for Phonotype, he all but lived in their studio for months on end!

It is probably safe to assume that Phonotype was a small concern, without much financial backing and with few distribution outlets. Its product betrays indications of a desire to save money: extremely poor accompanying orchestra; noisy surfaces. But the quality of the reproduction is excellent, as far as the voice is concerned, and well up to the standards which prevailed in the early twenties.

Oddly enough, the De Lucia Phonotypes seem to have received much greater circulation in the United States than they did in Europe, a condition for which one man is said to be entirely responsible. I refer to Benny Manno, an Italian barber long a resident of New York City. Back in the twenties, I understand, Manno, an ardent admirer of De Lucia's singing imported a large stock of the Phonotypes which he stored in the back of his barber shop. It was probably some years before he sold more than a few of these discs, for in those days there was little interest in records, especially if they were acoustically recorded, and De Lucia's name was not widely known in America. But when, in the middle thirties, collecting old vocal records became a popular pursuit, Manno found that his De Lucia Phonotypes began to command higher and higher prices. Since then, of course, the market has had its ups and downs and if Manno still has De Lucia Phonotypes in stock, I do not know what he is asking for them. Manno, incidentally, claims to be the only one who imported these records and, as far as I have been able to determine, he is correct in this assertion. For a long time, indeed, I suspected that he must have absorbed the entire Phonotype stock, for none of our English correspondents seemed to have records of this make, but during the war American soldiers found De Lucia Phonotypes for sale in their native city of Naples.

The Curious History of Music Boxes

By Mosorjak & Heckert

The story of automatic musical instruments, from their earliest conception down through the years to the invention of the phonograph, is authentically traced in this unusual book, that contains the description and interesting historical background of music boxes of all types, and illustrates many of the rarest examples. Some of these took strange shapes, such as the butterfly music box, or the musical pistol, and many others, and are pictured for the first time in this limited edition, which also includes a section on

ADA JONES. V.

Here's a coincidence: On the day after I wrote the installment of this series in which I mentioned that "Heine" and "The Hand of Fate" were among the first descriptive specialties recorded by Ada Jones and Len Spencer, I received a letter from that enthusiastic young collector, Allen Debus, of Glenview, Ill., saying he had found those very records. He did not know I was writing about Ada Jones, so it is particularly interesting to learn that he has come across her very earliest records—which I have never heard.

Obviously, it is inadvisable and unnecessary to try to give a complete account of all the work done by the Jones and Spencer partnership from the beginning of their association until Spencer's death in 1914. I shall mention, however, that their Victor version of the famous "Bowerly specialty," "Pals," was No. 4363, and that in 1906 they recorded "Peaches and Cream," an even more famous skit of the same type, for all the American phonograph companies.

It was not long before the glamorous recorded voice of the comedienne began to give her a popularity greater than that of the veteran comedian whose protegee she had become, and the editor of Edison's Phonogram magazine was flooded with requests for information about her. Many correspondents were particularly anxious to know if she were married. Some undoubtedly hoped she was not and longed for an opportunity to become "Mr. Ada Jones."

Commercial curiosity, however, was uppermost in the mind of E. S. B., of St. Paul, Minn., who asked in March, 1906: "How much do Miss Jones and Mr. Spencer receive for making a vaudeville record?" He was briefly told: "We cannot supply this information."

In November, 1906, the Columbia Record published, under the heading of "A Talented Pair," a photograph of Jones and Spencer, with the following comment:

"We print above pictures of two of the most famous record makers in the world. Mr. Spencer has long taken high rank as a Negro impersonator and his recitations and 'team' work with Miss Jones are exceedingly popular. Miss Jones, who was one of the first of the women record makers, is an artiste of the greatest versatility and in nothing is this more effectively shown than in her very clever imitations of Vesta Victoria and the way in which she renders the very popular songs 'Waiting at the Church' and 'It's All right in the Summer Time.' Had Miss Jones done nothing but sing these songs she would have won a place in the front rank of graphophone record makers, but this line of work is only one of dozens in which she has been equally successful. Thus it happens that Len Spencer with his great abundance of talent and Miss Jones with her long experience and distinct ability are, taken together, one of the most forceful and entertaining pairs that have ever engaged in the work of making talking machine records which are always popular and in lively demand."

The Phonogram for July, 1907, contained this communication from

A.A.A., of Kansas City, Mo.: "I heard from one of your jobbers last week that Ada Jones and Len Spencer were married to each other. If so, will you give me date of same?" The reply: "Both Ada Jones and Len Spencer are married, but not to each other."

I have been unable to ascertain the date of Ada Jones' marriage, but it probably took place before her recording career began. Her husband was Hughey Flaherty, a vaudeville performer whose fame never approached hers. He survived her by nearly twenty years. Not only was she frequently rumored to be the wife of Len Spencer but, later, was commonly believed to be married to Billy Murray.

And now we come to an event that, to the true old record enthusiast, is of even more historical interest than the beginning of the Jones and Spencer partnership. I refer to Miss Jones' singing association with Billy Murray, which began in 1907 and was not altogether severed until her death. The Jones—Murray duets undoubtedly were the most popular ever made for the phonograph by any singing pair, with the possible exception of those of Collins and Harlan and Billy Jones and Ernest Hare. Ada and Billy reached their greatest popularity after their partnership began.

Their first duet for Edison was issued in October, 1907. It was No. 9659, "Will You Be My Teddy Bear?" (a sufficiently silly title) and received this comment in the Phonogram: "This song was Anna Held's greatest hit in 'The Parisian Model' and is one of the biggest successes of recent years. Always up to date, the New York musical stage seized on the prevailing Teddy Bear fad and the result is this bright little song with its pretty refrain. Max Hoffman composed the music and Vincent Bryan wrote the words."

The first duet by Jones and Murray came out about the same time and bore the long and dignified title, "You Can't Give Your Heart to Somebody Else and Still Hold Hands With Me." It was No. 4891. As early as March, 1907, the pair had recorded this same number on Columbia XP Cylinder 33088, and in April had joined with Frank C. Stanley in singing, "Whistle It" from "The Red Mill." Their first association therefore appears to have been for Columbia.

Despite the apparent triviality of the first songs they sang together, the duets of Ada Jones and Billy Murray at once became a reigning fad and eclipsed the Jones—Spencer specialties, although the latter continued to be profusely recorded and to sell well. Ada and Billy were the first team to sing in what was termed a "conversational style," and their free-and-easy, down-to-earth manner apparently could not be imitated with complete success by anybody else. Many years later Bing Crosby said that when he and Mary Martin recorded a series of duets for Decca, they got out some old Jones and Murray records and tried to imitate them. I confess that I have never been able to see the slightest resemblance between Mr. Crosby's vocalizing and anything that Billy Murray did, but Bing showed that he at least knew a good model to pattern after.

The Phonogram had published in October, 1905, an unflattering photo of Miss Jones, which made her look middle-aged and gave the impression that her face was composed mostly of a large nose and an uncountable collection of oversized teeth. A better picture was used in February, 1908, accompanied by this note: "It is with much pleasure that we print in this issue a new photograph of Ada Jones. We have had many requests from her hosts of admirers to re-publish her picture but have refrained from doing so until we could get a better photograph than the one published in October, 1905. This one was taken recently and is a faithful likeness. Of all women now singing for the Phonograph or any other talking machine, Miss Jones is unquestionably the most popular."

In May, 1908, when a Jones—Murray duet of "When the Song of Love is Heard" was issued, the Phonogram said: "Miss Jones and Mr. Murray have each acquired an added vogue with these duet selections, for each new record of their making is more in demand than the previous one."

The question of Ada's marriage continued to preoccupy many readers. In December, 1908, B. A., of Trinity, Texas, wanted to know the marital status of both Jones and Murray. He, or she, asked: "Is Billy Murray married, and what state is he a native of? Who is Ada Jones married to—that is, is she married to any of your singers?" The answers: "Billy Murray is not married. He was born in Colorado. (This was a mistake, since Billy was born in Philadelphia.) Ada Jones is married, but not to any of our singers."

For the first two years of their association, "Miss Jones and Mr. Murray," as the Victor labels then listed them, without including their first names, sang together for all the American companies. In 1909, however, Billy signed a "joint contract," which restricted his services to Victor and Edison, and Miss Jones was obliged to find other partners when singing for other concerns. For several years she and Walter Van Brunt (Walter Scanlan) were associated on Columbia records, and their duets had much of the Jones—Murray flavor. Their team-work stopped when Walter became an exclusive Edison artist in 1914, and she then sang with several other partners. Henry Burr, using the name of Irving Gillette, appeared with her on several Columbia records, but his voice and style did not adapt very successfully to hers. She also sang with one Will C. Robbins, who may possibly have been Sam Ash, and did a few duets with M. J. O'Connell for Columbia and Pathé.

British Masterpieces To Be Shown In America

Chauncey McCormick, president of the Art Institute of Chicago has announced that the greatest collection of British art ever to leave England, consisting of works by Constable, Hogarth and Turner, is being sent to the Art Institute of Chicago for a two-month exhibition starting in early October, and then to be exhibited some time after Christmas at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Mr. McCormick and Daniel Catton Rich, director of the Art Institute, recently returned from England where they were the guests of the British Foreign Office. Their mission was entirely successful, according to cables received from Lord Halifax, former Ambassador to the United States, and from Lord Clarendon, the Lord Chamberlain, giving final and complete confirmation to the arrangements discussed in London.

Among the pictures already promised are: Ten by William Hogarth (1697-1764), famous realist and satirist, the most noted of which are the portrait of the actor, "David Garrick and his Wife," lent by H. M. The King, from the Royal Apartments in Windsor Castle; the six paintings of Hogarth's "Marriage a la Mode" lent by the Tate Gallery, London, and "The Shrimp Girl" lent by the National Gallery. The Tate Gallery is also lending nine works by Joseph M. W. Turner (1775-1851) which include the world famous paintings, "Fire at Sea" and "Bay of Baiae." Five other Turners lent by the National Gallery include the much reproduced masterpiece, "Calais Peir." Eight works by John Constable (1776-1837), are being lent by the Victoria and Albert Museum, the Tate Gallery, and the National Gallery, among which are his most loved landscapes, "The Hay-Wain," "Hadleigh Castle" and "Hampstead Heath."

The Victoria and Albert Museum is also lending 24 dazzling sketches from nature painted in oil by Constable of the English landscape which show his great influence on modern art.

In addition to the above list, committee appointed by Ernest Bevin, Minister of Foreign Affairs, consisting of Leigh Ashton, director of the Victoria and Albert Museum as chairman, John Rothenstein, director of the Tate Gallery, and Philip Hendy, director of the National Gallery of London, are obtaining other well-known works of Constable, Hogarth and Turner from certain outstanding English collectors.

The exhibition will show for the first time in America three of the greatest English painters who importantly changed the course of later art and who so far have been inadequately shown in the United States. This exhibition will rank with the great Institute exhibits of Italian, Dutch and French masterpieces.

"TINY FOLIO" LITHOGRAPHS

By JOHN RAMSAY

THE subject of American prints is almost inexhaustible. A recent digression into the field of English prints, those of Baxter and LeBlond, stressing the popular "LeBlond ovals" brought attention to the little-known fact that those enterprising Americans, Currier & Ives, copied these in size, and also in quality and subject although by their own process of lithography, not the block printing of the English ones. Unlike these, our American lithographs are rarely smaller than "small folio," approximately 12x8½", but there are a few in the "Tiny Folio," about seven by five and a half used by the English publishers. Of 7,000 known prints by N. Currier and Currier & Ives, only 70 or so are this small size, so it is evident that they are not common.

Of course, there is no good reason why Currier & Ives and their competitors should not make small prints, and there are many of these used as book illustrations, mainly uncolored, the tinted plates by Duval, Weber of Baltimore, Sarony and others in the 13-volume "Reports of Explorations and Surveys for a Railroad From the Mississippi River to the Pacific" of 1855-1858 the best-known exceptions. But Currier & Ives did few book illustrations, although the horse portraits in Frank Forrester's, "Horses of the United States" are theirs, and their small prints were intended to be framed. As such, they were probably poor sellers and not very popular, which explains their rarity today.

Actually, Currier & Ives turned out a wide variety of titles in this "tiny folio" size. A dozen of the long catalog of trotting horses so interesting in the decade between 1875 and 1885 appear, with copies of many of the equally popular comic subjects of the same period. Some of these latter, as "The Best Prize Horse on the Market" and "Please Give Me a Light, Sir" are tobacco advertisements. Other "tiny folios" are copies of adaptations of popular titles first issued in the larger sizes, "Trotters on the Representative "tiny folio" Currier & Ives.

Snow," "Squirrel Shooting," "The River Road" and others. Even flower and fruit prints and named ladies are on the list. Also, several Currier & Ives small folio prints contain more than one picture. "Christmas Snow" and "A Ride to School" are on the same sheet, while "Miniature Landscapes" has ten small scenes. And, like many of its competitors, the house issued several small folio sheets of "Drawing Studies" for the guidance of "art students."

So only a few of the "tiny folios" can actually be considered adaptations of the "LeBlond ovals." That shown, "An American Winter Scene" is one of the rarest and best, and its delicacy and vigor of drawing compare favorably with the better-known English prints. The others follow LeBlond's choice of subjects. "Highland Water-Fall," "Chepstow Ruins" and "Tell's Chapel" being among the firm's comparatively few European scenes. But there are American ones, too, "Saratoga Lake" of course, and a "View on the Hudson." Only some ten titles can be included in the series, none of them common, so that these small prints can appeal only to the collector who likes the unusual and hard to find pieces. But they are, in their way, as fine examples of American lithography as the larger and more popular "Best Fifty," and deserve more attention than they have received.

DOLL-LOGY

"The Ex-Moonshiner"

Here's a close-up of one of Mrs. Starling's latest dolls, "The Ex-Moonshiner." The hound dogs at his feet are made of ordinary pipe cleaner.

The hobby of making dolls, which started in her youth has brought considerable recognition to Mrs. Edna Ruth Starling, wife of a Houston, Tex., dentist.

Mrs. Starling usually gets her ideas for a doll from magazine or newspaper pictures. Among her best sellers are the set from the book "Gone With the Wind;" Long John Silver, from "Treasure Island;" Uncle Tom and Little Eva, from "Uncle Tom's Cabin;" The Walking Preacher of the Ozarks, from a picture in Life Magazine; Indian dolls from pictures in the National Geographic Magazine; and "The Ex-Moonshiner," from the book, "Fresh From the Hills," by Marguerite Lyons.

How does she make her dolls?

Well, the faces are made either of hickory nuts or dehydrated apples. Nuts are shaped into faces with the use of a pocketknife. The body is composed of wire, wound with cloth. Mrs. Starling prefers wire so the doll can be bent into any position. Incidentally, Houston merchants have been saving Mrs. Starling wire from bread boxes, because the kind she needs cannot be purchased.

After the body is completed, Mrs. Starling makes the costume and adds the finishing touches. In addition to her doll making, she finds time to work on oil paintings; takes care of her household duties, assists her husband in his office and looks after her two children.

An Arkansas Collection

Arkansas is said to excel in many things, including beautiful scenery, romance, and originality. This department would like to point out also that it has a large number of doll collectors. One of these, Mrs. Charles Coonley, and her collection received a double page spread story in the Arkansas Democrat newspaper a short time ago.

The author, Sarah Mizell Morgan pointed out several interesting facts about dolls and the Coonley collection which we quote, in part:

"In this collection are 200 or more dolls including the last one from the owner's doll days.

"The costumes are representative of styles from a century ago to the latest evening gown of pink taffeta worn by 'Sylvia' the lady from Hollywood with her modern upturn hairdo. And real hair it is too.

"And there are many of the smaller models including the kewpies that form a nudist colony.

"And to add to the attraction and interest of the collection, the dolls have their own furniture. There are high chairs, baby buggies, tables, rocking chairs, replicas of antique beds, chests of drawers and even a bassinet for the By-Lo Baby. And handmade rag rugs in miniature enhance the color scheme of the bedrooms.

"The displays are attractively arranged in groups. A dining room shows the family seated around the dinner table which is completely set, including the food. Another scene reveals the family at home in the living room, and the bedroom scenes might be typical of any real home.

"A doll house of six rooms modern and completely furnished occupies one entire corner of the room.

"The kitchen includes an electric refrigerator and waffle iron in miniature. And the family, all miniature dolls, are at home in every room from the nursery to mother's bedroom with its chaise lounge, sewing cabinet and tiny typewriter. The nurse's quarters and a school room are located in the rear of this modern home.

"According to Mrs. Coonley, securing furniture for the dolls has become almost as difficult as getting the right dolls.

"Dolls are more than just toys for children to play with. They are more than just hobbies for collectors who prize them.

"Dolls are educational and informative for their relationship to life is limitless. And like man, their history is long and varied.

"The existence of dolls dates back to the Stone Age when primitive man carved an image to portray his God and as a guard against evil forces.

"And down through the centuries dolls have been a visible, tangible record of civilization and its progress.

"There are early Egyptian, Greek, Roman, Asiatic and African models. There are French dolls, English types and German models from the days when Germany monopolized the doll industry.

"Then we have the American wooden dolls and other American types.

"And the old-fashioned rag doll is still one of the most popular and best loved dolls among children and collectors.

"No collection would be complete without character dolls.

"Mrs Coonley's character group includes well known and loved American characters as well as those from other countries.

"In the American group is General MacArthur who stands several inches high and looks quite life-like in his khaki uniform with his hand raised in salute.

"Sleeping Beauty dreams peacefully on the chaise lounge while Alice in Wonderland looks on in amazement at the whole scene.

"And Shirley Temple with her short golden curls looks so real you almost expect her to smile and say 'Hello.' And Deanna Durbin just looks on.

"Scarlet O'Hara with her hat at a rakish angle looks askance at Carmen Miranda while Charlie McCarthy, enamored, spends his time watching Sonja skating on the 'cotton' ice.

"Others include Henry, Lulu, Butch, Flora McFlimsy and McGuffy Ann.

"But one of the most interesting character dolls is the English Peddler doll, a woman. This picturesque doll with a red cape and cap is a replica of the London street vendor of more than a century ago. The basket swung from the shoulders contains miniatures of the vendor's wares such as needles, pins, rings and other small household articles which the vendor sold from door to door.

"Some of the Peddler models date back to 1810 but the earlier models are very rare and hard to get.

"Others of Mrs. Coonley's collection include Eskimos, Indians, a Mexican group and one from the West Indies. And the Czechoslovakian boy and girl in native costumes are an interesting pair.

"One of the owner's favorites is the Russian maiden, a small doll in the colorful costume of the Russians which she bought from the Russian relief in 1942 just after the dolls had been brought to this country.

"In contrast to the Russian maid is the Matreshka doll. The Matreshka or mother doll is the favorite doll of the Russian children. It is a three-in-one doll made of wood with the face painted on. The largest doll is about four inches high and the others smaller, each fitting inside the other.

"Timothy Egg is the smallest jointed doll in the world, handsome in Italy. Hardly more than an inch long and too fragile for a toy, Timothy is fitted into a wooden egg. The egg slightly longer than the doll is painted and decorated in an attractive design.

"In the early days dolls were not always made for toys. Some were for hobbies or souvenirs. One of the most fascinating of these is the All-In-One doll, better known as the Tea-Cup doll, an American model released in 1876 at the Philadelphia Centennial. This tiny doll scarcely an inch and a half long is blown into a small long-necked bottle. The bottle is then filled with water and sealed.

"The name Tea-Cup doll originated from its use in the early days. The doll was placed in the thin china tea cups to prevent breaking. Later, the cup, saucer and the doll was presented to the guest.

"We have seen incubator babies no larger than the realistic By-Lo baby complete with all accessories including bottle and nipples.

"The artist searched many months for just the right model for her dream-doll. That certain something was finally found in a three-day-old infant from which the mold was cast.

"According to Mrs. Coonley, the most valuable of her collection is her 'Stephen Foster.'

"The collection was started two years ago with an old Balkan model in native costume.

"The latest addition is a 'First Lady' doll which collectors say is more than a hundred years old. This doll with a stone bisque face has copper luster shoes and is a very rare model. The doll was obtained from an old gold collector in Missouri and no complete record of its history seems available. The clothes are faded and fragile and one pearl earring is missing although the tiny necklace of pearls is still intact.

"Queen Victoria is another model that catches your eye.

"As a girl Mrs. Coonley loved playing with dolls but never thought of collecting them. But she had always wanted a doll house.

"Two years ago Mr. Coonley, gave her the six-room doll house for Christmas. But a doll house wasn't much use without tenants. So that's how the hobby started.

"And Mrs. Coonley enthusiastically declares that doll collecting is the most fascinating and interesting hobby in the world."

"Tex" of "Up in Central Park"

Ann Thomas, talented actress of the stage and radio, who is appearing in John Golden's late production, "It's a Man's World" has added another doll, "Tex," to her collection.

Tex's background before joining the Thomas collection, like that of many other dolls, is humble. Miss Thomas tells her story:

"A few months ago while Mother and I were in Chicago, and shopping along Clark Street, we bought a very lovely old doll. The dealer 'threw in' an old wreck of a German jointed doll, pre-first World War. Her wig was moth eaten, her fingers gone, unstrung and very dirty. Earle MacVeigh, baritone, in the cast of "Up in Central Park," became very interested in my doll collection and said that if he had a doll he would dress it for me in leather.

"Mother produced the 'old wreck' and I took it off to a doll repair place who asked $13.50 to put it back in condition. We figured that the poor thing wasn't worth that much and thought perhaps we could fix her ourselves. We went to work on her, with enamel, plastic wood, bought new eyes and a pretty red wig. We re-strung her using a champagne cork and a stage brace pin to supply the missing parts. I made underwear and a shirt of checkered material and stockings, wrapped her in a turkish towel and turned her over to Mr. MacVeigh.

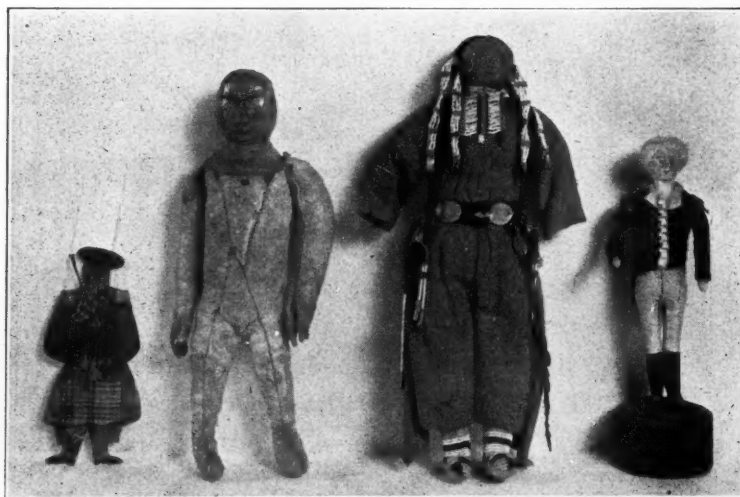

"Tex now holds forth in full glory. She has a complete outfit made of leather, even down to boots that are beautifully beaded and gauntlet gloves. She has a hand tooled holster belt and two guns. The outfit was copied from a combination of pictures of the original Annie Oakley and the costumes of Ethel Merman in the present Broadway smash hit 'Annie Get Your Gun'."

Mr. MacVeigh will deliver Tex to Miss Thomas personally when he gets back to New York following his tour with the popular and successful play.

Meantime it would seem from Tex's cheerful countenance, that she is enjoying her tour with the cast of "Up in Central Park."

BECKY, MY FIRST LOVE

featuring an exquisite china doll of the romantic pioneer era of the Northwest

Travel with her in covered wagons, over Indian trails, where the early Winnebagoes made their homes. Make the trip with her to grandma's in that old black buggy. Watch the sunset over the Sauk hills. Listen to the tinkling of the bells on the cattle coming down the lane — and Cousin David's wife Persis, singing Rock of Ages, her evening hymn to the baby. Watch grandma prepare the supper of potatoes, salt-pork and cream gravy, soda biscuits and maple syrup. The story of Becky and other dolls covers a period of more than 100 years, with an historical background. There are 21 beautiful illustrations. The fan mail from hundreds of delighted readers, age 8 to 80, proves its popularity. Handsomely bound in Russian red cloth, with gold lettering, it is a perfect gift book.

League of American Wheelmen

By D. TUDOR HARRELL

"Be stirring boys, we ought to have a run Look, did you ever see so fine a day."

The chief event of the year 1878 was the founding of the Bicycle Union of Great Britain, on February 16.

In 1880, the League of American Wheelmen was organized at Newport. There was a president, vice-president, commander, corresponding secretary, recording secretary, treasurer, and each State was given the choice of two delegates to the board of officers.

The national officers and the State delegates formed this board of officers. The fee was $1, except that clubs which required the entire membership to become League members were entitled to enroll their members for 50c each.

In June, 1882, a national election was held by mail and officers elected for each State. A State was then entitled to a Chief Consul. If it had no more than one member, the individual had to vote for himself. If, for any reason, he failed to do this, he was later appointed.

The combined boards of all the divisions formed the national board of officers and they held three meetings a year.

In 1899 a Touring Bureau was opened in connection with the Secretary's office in Boston and a Press Committee appointed with headquarters in New York. This Touring Bureau not only accomplished the concentration of official L. A. W. data, but placed at the disposal of League members all information contained in the latest maps and guide-books published in Europe and America. An alliance was also consummated with the great touring associations of Europe, which gave members of the L. A. W. all the advantages enjoyed in their respective countries by members of the European organizations.

The official organ which published free of charge all notices, billing each member $2 for the subscription fee, was The Bicycling World, said to be the first of all cycling papers in America.

The Road Book of the Ohio Division contained a map each of 88 counties, a folding map of the State, names of local consuls and League hotels, Ohio glass and tack law, Ohio guide board law, bicycle baggage law, etc. It was pocket size and bound in flexible morocco leather. This was given free to all members.

The supreme rule of the road:

"Thou shalt use it so as to interfere as little as possible with the equal right of every person to it at the same time; and thou shalt be reasonably careful that no one suffer injury thereon or by act or neglect of thine."

Bipedaliferous Wheels

By D. TUDOR HARRELL

"There is no disputing against Hobby Horses; and for my part, I seldom do—I keep a couple of pads myself upon which, in their turns, I frequently ride out."—STERNE

The first occurrence of the name "bicycle" appears in the provision specification of J. I. Stassen, April 1869:

"My invention relates to the construction of velocipedes known as the bicycle."

The Strand Magazine, Vol. XII, 1896, contains an account of the "Herculean Human Motor," Maurice Pardo, who balanced and propelled 25 persons, a total weight of more than 4,000 pounds on his two-wheeled machine.

The same issue describes a wheel made entirely of wood by a French peasant; a ubiquitous cycle, invaluable for riding to market several miles away.

Some years ago, Eugene Bell, of Oakton, Va., made himself a wooden bicycle. He was a carpenter and it was a beautiful wheel. At a race meet in Vienna, Va., his nephew, playing a joke on the racers, dashed in at the finish on the wooden wheel from a hidden spot on the track, and many spectators thought he had been in the race.

The Strand of September 1897, describes a curious unicycle the "Big Egg," built by the "Villions" a troupe of trick cyclists. The wheel was oval, enclosed in a wicker frame (egg-shaped) with cranks and pedals on the outside, producing a curious effect.

Ripley gives us two unique items, the single wheel on which Harry Park rode down Pike's Peak in 1892, standing on the axle, governing the momentum with his hands and a tricycle built for eight, 17 feet long with rear wheels 22 feet in circumference, in Boston in 1890.

The Strand of August, 1897, notes the ride of N. Noiset on half a wheel, with long and powerful cranks which saved the day when the flat side was about to come down.

A water cycle or velocipede was patented December 22, 1897, by S. E. Maxon of Portland, Ore. This was a cigar-shaped tube in two sections, arranged on a shaft.

A fine polar bear mounted upon a specially built tricycle, which propelled the machine by means of the pedal cranks upon which his front paws rested, was to be seen in the Hagenbeck's unique emporium says the Strand of September 1897.

BRASS BUTTONS

By MILDRED F. BOYCE

When you turn your hobby horse toward Brass Button Town, you are really going some place! Along the wayside you will see all the flowers of many lands, together with many kinds of trees; and lurking in their branches, or behind them, you can see wild animals which you had hoped and expected were many thousands of miles away.

It would be easy to believe that all the buttons in the world must be brass, there are so many of them. There are solid, or one-piece brass buttons, and there are two- and three-piece ones. There are buttons with brass collars (collars) and without; there are pressed brass and pierced brass, and some that are both pressed and pierced. There are large and small and medium brass buttons, and some that come in several sizes.

Many buttons made of other materials or metals are bound with brass, have brass trimmings or brass shanks. Brass shanks, by the way, make an interesting study by themselves. Their shapes, holes and size may tell where they were made, and surely will tell how old they are.

You can almost illustrate a history book with brass buttons. Pictures of kings and queens, knights and ladies, courtiers, explorers, soldiers and heroes, as well as famous buildings and famous people of all times can be found on brass buttons.

And many a story of the Bible could be made more interesting by examining some brass button picture. There is the lion sitting on his haunches before the grated window of his den with a palm leaf at the side to say that this is a Bible story. He is so gaunt and fierce-looking that one can only think he sits there waiting for Daniel to be thrown in for him to devour. There is Miriam set to watch over Moses in the bulrushes; and there is the Madonna and Child.

You can make a very interesting collection of gods and goddesses and their like, from Neptune with his trident to Phaethon and his horses. And if you have money enough, you can follow the sun's path through the stars with zodiac buttons, but you will find that an expensive trip.

It would be possible to study wars through their uniform buttons, and it might prove interesting to learn the history of each state through its seal. Or you could follow the streetcars throughout the nation with a collection of their uniform buttons. In fact, there is no end to where you may travel if you start your hobby horse toward Brass Button Town.

FUNNIES

By RITA COLLINS

Most of us, who still get a "kick" out of life, read the funnies. They are always good for a laugh. The "Goofie" or "Funny" buttons are to the button collector as the funnies are to the newspaper reader, something to make the day a little brighter, and a little happier.

There are four types of funny buttons to collect. Celluloid pin-back buttons have some funnies among them—Little Abner's Ma, etc. I don't collect these so do not know much about them, but it would be interesting to hear from a collector who has a lot of funnies in this type.

The second type which make a dandy card are the lapel buttons. I have one showing a bicycle seat, lettered "Its Nose is Soft." Another shaped like a Bull Moose, full figure, no doubt worn in the lapel of a campaigner for Teddy Roosevelt. Then there is the one the shape of a china potty with china lapel shank, with lettering in gold on the front. This must have been worn by a Gay Nineties Dandy. Can't you just see him in his tight trousers and high hat going down the street swinging a cane and wearing a china potty in his lapel. I'll bet he got a kick out of embarrassing the girls of those days with that lapel button.

The third kind are the overall buttons. One shows a bulldog with a belligerent look on his face, standing as if he defied everyone to pass, lettered "Boss of the Road." Another of a man's grinning face lettered "Stronghold Steve." Evidently Stevie will hold up your overalls with a strong hold so you won't ever be embarrassed by the loss of a button. One shows a Mule lettered "Red Mule." Another is a Tomcat ready to fight. The hair on his back is up, his mouth is open and one paw is raised as if he were ready to fight out every one of his "9 lives" which is the lettering on it.

The fourth type, those most generally collected, are the plastic and china moderns most of you call "Goofies" and which were so ably describe by Beryl Stewart in the August HOBBIES. I believe the one I like best is the funny face with the red nose. Right now these are very scarce, but maybe we will be able to buy them again some day, so that all the collectors who are young in heart can have their own "Funny Pictures."

Rhoda

I would like to know how some of the button collectors feel about the button called "Rhoda." Why not "Helga?" from "The Marsh King's Daughter" found in Andersen's "Wonder Stories." This story and the story of Moses in the Bulrushes are two of the oldest and longest tales. Of the two most ancient and longest traditions that have been handed down to us, we are the most acquainted with Moses in the Bulrushes.

"The Marsh King was an alder tree, and the Princess came disguised as a swan. Later on, a bud appeared upon the marshes and it was a babe. The stork said she was "Helga" the daughter of the Princess and the Marsh King. The Marsh King's wife was the Princess from the Nile.

"The story continues;".....over the wide morass was a mass of water-lilies, which looked like a carpet of embroidered flowers. Upon it lay a female, sleeping, young and beautiful....."

"Sayings from the Bible are quoted throughout this story, and we should all read and become acquainted with this ancient tale."

Doris Kendall, Mass.

CHICAGO SHOW

Let's meet back in old Chicago;
Back to see the show;
Folks from Maine to San Diego
Have buttons there, you know.
Rare and old buttons from Boston;
Sparkling jewels set in gold.
Carved pearls, inlays and calicoes,
Historic scenes yet untold.
Fort Dearborn is filled with traffic.
If you can stand the crush,
Let's meet back in old Chicago;
Meet all at the Show.

Mrs. Blanche Edler, Ohio

CLUBS

MASSACHUSETTS

The Crescent Button Club of Connecticut Valley celebrated its sixth anniversary recently at the home of its organizer, Mr. Charles Slight, of Agawam, Mass.

Six candles were lit on a huge cake amid table decorations of roses and double orange blossoms. Favors were dancing dolls with little button faces, made of pipe cleaners and dollies.

OJO

INDIANA

Mrs. Vera Duggan entertained the "Council Oak Club" recently in Robertson's Tea Room, South Bend, Ind. Roses were used for table decorations, strawberries and ice cream for refreshments.

One game of 26 button questions was enjoyed, the questions being about subjects studied throughout the year. Two prizes were awarded; First prize, a large brass Lion Head; second prize, a basket of Rose Buttons.

IT'S ALL ORIGINAL!

I. Nails versus Wooden Pegs

By BILL KANE

Something final about printing, the art preservative of all arts, leads serious antiquers to damaging conclusions, because book writers cannot always be limiting their statements with warnings. I am thinking now about the collector who having seen one obviously old piece of furniture that was joined with wooden pegs and dovetailed, or having read a description of such a piece, concludes that if a chest or chair or table is nailed it cannot be a choice antique.

I cannot find any record of the first making of nails by a blacksmith. But references in literature, quoted by the Oxford English Dictionary, show that King Alfred referred to iron nails in 893 and Bede in 900. That Jesus was nailed to the cross with iron spikes seems established. By 1600 nails were being mass produced in England. Women and children worked in hovels, under slave like conditions, to produce nails for middlemen who were called nail masters.

The making of machinery to turn out nails began in England in 1617. The perfection of nail making machinery, an American accomplishment, began in 1786, when a patent was granted to Ezekiel Reed. Before this time nails were wrought by the blacksmith and cast by the founder, and I have seen nails made by each that were deceptively perfect. "Hand made" nails are a relatively minor indicia of antiquity, and machine-made nails began to be made in America in the first years of the Federal period.

My own opinion, based upon many years of careful examination of several thousand antiques, is that wooden pegs are not necessarily proof of great antiquity. The last piece of furniture with wooden pegs throughout that I know of, was a very primitive wooden settee, with Hitchcock legs and other details, that had been used as a waiting-room bench in a hotel that was opened to accommodate passengers on the Delaware Canal. Though this canal was begun in 1827, and short sections may have been used soon thereafter, no boats made the journey from Easton to Bristol, Pa., before 1832, and it is likely the traffic would not have called for a hotel to accommodate travellers on the canal until 1840. This fits in with the date by which a cabinet maker in Pennsylvania would have been likely to have a mental image of Hitchcock details, or plans showing such design, so it is evident that this fine old primitive, held together throughout with wooden peg, is relatively young in years.

I have seen a lovely mahogany sideboard dresser, of a design that established the makers as partners who were dead by 1820, a piece the lines of which suggested pre-Revolutionary or at the latest Federal period craftsmanship, that had nailed drawers and a minimum of dovetailing. The lines of a piece of furniture, the kind and character of the wood, and the marks of tools are more important than a detail such as the nature of joining, because it stands to reason that a maker would always use the most modern devices at his disposal. So sound and true is this last statement, that I have come to expect an original Queen Anne or Chippendale piece, that evidently was made after 1800, to show signs of the round or oval brasses we call Sheraton or Hepplewhite or Federal period. These, not Chippendale brasses, were the pulls and escutcheons stocked by hardware dealers after 1800, because these were the latest fashion. When I see a fine Pennsylvania high chest with evidently old Chippendale brasses, with marks indicating that round or oval brasses had preceded these, I am not greatly disturbed. A later owner evidently realized he had a piece that was better fitted with Chippendale brasses, and made the change.

I have seen the other side of this phenomenon, a highboy, evidently pre-Revolutionary, with oval brasses of the Federal period. Undoubtedly when the owner's neighbors began to display their furniture with the newest in brasses, he or his wife was impelled to remove the Chippendale brasses and replace them with the latest style. In one case, I have even found the original brasses, lovely small Chippendale kind, wrapped in a piece of cloth and preserved in a highboy that was then graced with old oval Sheraton brasses.

Such changes make the evidently all original chest of drawers very unusual. There are few of these, and most of them are in museums, or are in the possession of owners who think nothing of saying they will never sell them, or that if they do, the check will have to approximate $45,000, the amount paid at auction for an eminently beautiful highboy from the Reifsnnyder collection.

Does presence of a French or wire nail used to repair an old piece reduce its value greatly? I think not. For instance, drawers of fine old pieces were used, occasionally were dropped, boards sprang and bottoms were sometimes broken out, especially if made of thin knotty pine. What would you do, if a drawer of a piece you were using regularly needed mending? Would you use hammer and nails? So natural was this practice that as early as 1687 there is a reference to the use of nails for mending and strengthening a piece of furniture. By the way the earliest reference in English literature to a wooden peg or pin of timber is in 1440. Wooden pegs were often called treenails in olden times, which seems to suggest something about the more frequent use of iron sprigs or brads or roses or nails in wood working.

I have observed that wooden pegs have a tendency to pop out of antique pieces. The pegs in the canal boat waiting room Hitchcock bench protruded a sixteenth of an inch, and some had been broken off. To prevent this, square pegs of hard wood were sometimes driven into smaller round holes in softer wood. I like to see these in a piece, but it does not happen often, and when found, establishes nothing final about the age of the piece. The style, the evidences of age of the wood, and marks of tools are most important. Do not be over-influenced by salon jabber about the great antiquity of a piece "with wooden pegs everywhere." Look for simple lines, recognizably natural and uncontrived, for all antiques sing of these qualities.

If I could only get to Boston and get some new stock!

How many dealers have said that same thing? But you can get to Boston and you can get stock. Dealers all over the country do and they don't even leave their place of business.

How is it done?—Mail Order Service with a reliable firm that has years of service in its field because it satisfactorily meets the needs of its customers.—Richard R. Fine & Sons.

Only recently we made up lists of goods available in our six-story building and the response has been tremendous. Everyone wants a crack at the goods. We try to meet the dealer's requests for photographs and if none is available, we sketch and give as good a description as possible.

But it is gratifying to receive letters from dealers saying how pleased they are. They know, if they are dissatisfied, we will take the necessary steps to see things are righted.

Our system is calculated to serve all antique dealers; the lady that buys an occasional lot; the big dealer who comes here and buys a carload or a vanload.

If you are a dealer and have not received our latest list, write for it immediately. Do not deprive yourself of good customers by not having the right stock. You will always be sure of finding the right stock at reasonable prices at:

ANTIQUE. SHOW

ST. JOHN'S
EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Worthington, Ohio
October 22, 23, 24

P. O. Box 1097

Providence, Rhode Island

6 Plank seat very old maple chairs with spindle backs, and with cross stretcher at top in fine structural cond. but "in the rough." Ready to be refinished or decorated. These chairs are simple but are genuine antiques. Typical New England chairs. Price for set $30.00

A pair of beautiful Staffordshire figures, a boy and girl in colorful costumes each holding immense bunches of purple grapes in their hands. The faces are charming, and the pair is appealing. Both wear plumed hats. They are 10" tall. Lovely! Price $65.00

A fine black walnut extension table with two leaves in perfect condition. This table is a beauty with oval drop leaves. Closed it measures 11x23" open it measures 41x51" and fully extended it measures 41x75", and will seat 10 to 12 people. It has been oiled rubbed and is ready to use. Price $78.00

A beautiful old Bohemian bottle in gorgeous red with grapes and vine leaves cut to clear, both on the bottle, and also on the blown stopper. It is 10" tall overall and in perfect condition. Price $19.00

An outstanding old Gov. Winthrop desk in pine. Magnificent old dovetailing on top & through out. Bracket feet, all refinished, and in perfect shape. There has been some restoration. The brasses are fine copies of the original ones. It is a beauty! It measures 38" across the front. Its a real bargain. $225.00

A magnificent Victorian Mantel set of stunning importance. A red onyx and gilt clock, with two accompanying red onyx vases standing on feet and 22-karat gold lined. The clock is in perfect running condition with exquisite strike and French movement. The vases match the clock exactly. This is an outstanding beautiful set. The clock is 19" tall overall and 10" wide. The vases are 9" tall, and 5" wide. All are footed and gold decorated. $100.00

An elaborate silver plated castor with 6 matching bottles. This castor is in perfect shape and is 19" tall. It holds the bottles in sockets, and the outside silver band is wide and embossed heavily with roses. It stands on four feet, and is extremely graceful. The silver plate is original and in first class condition. It's an unusual piece. Price $30.00

A copper luster pitcher that is 8" tall and set with a 2" band of cerulian blue and a design in copper luster on it. This is a very old luster in perfect condition, & a beauty! $20.00

A grand old coffer's bench with a big deep drawer, fine old souge holes and sections for nails, etc. This bench has been reglued and is in first class structural condition, but it must be refinished. The seat and top are finely shaped and the legs pegged through like the Windsor chairs. It measures 40" long by 20" wide, seat 14" by 19". It would be ideal for a cocktail or coffee table or for magazines. It seems as if we can not find enough of these benches to go around—so if you want it, speak early. Price $50.00

One of the finest early English teapots we have ever seen. This is a boat shaped pot, decorated with currant and two shades of green leaves. It is a large pot and absolutely proof and 150 years old. It is surpassingly beautiful, decorative and lovely. $18.00

Pair of rare rice china blue Canton cups and saucers, both cups and saucers are translucent with rice design. They are old and perfect and lovely, so very delicate! Price for pair $15.00

Pair of Royal Worcester demi-tasse in imperial lemon yellow with rich border of black in conventional design. These cups and saucers are marked and are proof, and exquisite. Price for pair $20.00

Two old blue plates for hanging. These are marked Lancaster and show the castle in background and a group of peasants to the fore. They are English and measure 10" and are a beautiful color. Price $8.00

Pair of carved ivory fighting cocks that are exquisite. They are 2½" with every feather and detail carved minutely, great plumed tails, and perfectly carved neck feathers. They stand on clawed feet and one claw of one foot on each cock is nicked—no harm at all. Both are perfect otherwise, and each different from the other. Price for pair $25.00

Early ladder back chair that has all been refinished and is in perfect shape. Seat has been newly resplined and is broad and comfortable. This would make a swell desk or occasional chair it has great early charm. Price $18.00

A beautiful copper kettle that hangs on an elaborate wrought iron stand 18" tall. Kettle holds 2 qts., and is all copper and is brightly pink in color. It is a very lovely fireplace ornament. The kettle is Swedish. $30.00

A beautiful old Sandwich milk glass overlay basket, with a pink ruffled edge and a twisted handle. It measures approx. 10" by 7", and it is in proof condition and really rare, lovely. Price $22.00

A pair of silver on copper candlesticks with separate bobèches. They are approx. 10" tall and 5" across the base. Beautiful simple elegant lines and old! Silver in excellent condition. Price for pair $25.00

A fine early scalloped paneled flaring celery with bell tone, and 10" tall. Beautiful old glass. Price $6.00

FOR SALE:

This clock stands nine feet six inches high, dial fourteen inches in diameter. The name James Wood & Company, 16 Cortland Street, New York, is on the bottom of the pendulum. The case is solid walnut and in perfect condition. It has a three dial arrangement, second hand above, hour hand below and minute hand in the center. It is a jeweled escapement and has three tubes of mercury in the pendulum, and is a very accurate time keeper.

The information on this clock is the movement, pendulum and case, are "hand-made." That is, each made entirely by one artist workman, rather than by subdivided labor plan used even in handicraft days for making articles of ordinary quality in quantities.

Such clocks were used by jewelers, railroads at terminal offices, public institutions and in the homes of wealthy people, as standard sources for local time. They were modifications of clocks used in astronomical observatories, had the same kind of dials as this clock, but were regulated to keep mean solar time instead of the sidereal ("star") time that is used for astronomical reckoning.

Louis Brodstone's Titled Sister Again in News

An Associated Press story by Tim Parker recently carried the life story of Lady Evelyn Vestey, titled sister of the late Louis Brodstone, one of the country's well known collectors, who for 35 years or more was editor of Philatelic West. It was this magazine that Mr. Lightner used as a nucleus in founding HOBBIES Magazine.

The story emanated from Superior, Neb., where the headline feature was "Cinderella Girl's Ashes Returning to Home Town." Her life story reads like a typical success story from the days when success was looked up to. We quote, in part:

"Superior, Neb.—The ashes of Lady Evelyn Vestey are on the way home to the town she left 51 years ago to take a stenographer's job. It's another Cinderella story; The transition from a $12-a-week office worker to a $250,000-a-year executive, from farm girl to the wife of an English lord.

"It is the story also of a woman who never forgot her home town nor its people.

"Lady Vestey died in 1941, only five months after the death of her husband, Lord William Vestey. She specified that her ashes were to be returned to Superior and placed on her mother's grave.

"War delayed fulfillment of the request. But now word has come that the ashes are on the way, probably aboard a vessel similar to those which she used to help build the British empire's meat industry.

"Evelyn Brodstone—as many old residents of Superior still remember her—was a 12-months-old baby when her father, Hans Brodstone, died at the family's farm home. By the time she was graduated from high school at 14—youngest graduate in Superior's history—she knew her widowed mother would need help.

She studied at a Burlington, Ia., business college, then went to Chicago and a $12 a week job as stenographer for the Vestey Meat Packing Co.

"A wealthy Englishman, William Vestey, owned and operated the firm. One day his regular secretary was ill and Miss Brodstone was sent in her place. The next day Vestey handed down this note to his office staff:

"Hereafter send that new girl from Nebraska when I call for a stenographer. She knows her business."

TIMEPIECES FOR SALE

COLLECTORS! DEALERS! Do your own clock repairing, refinishing. Complete instructions in "Clock Collector's Handbook," $1.25 postpaid.—Kenneth Karsten, Delanco, N. J. n128001

WANTED AND FOR SALE: Antiques, clocks, including Cuckoo.—Thomas Long, Wellington, Kans. n6882

ANTIQUE CLOCKS bought and sold.—Francis B. Platt, 1027 Wendell Ave., Schenectady, N. Y. mh12276

"The Nebraska farmer's daughter did, indeed, know her business. Soon she was being called into business councils. She was made a director of the firm.

"When Vestey was called to England, she was left in charge of the Chicago plant. A few years later she moved to London, where she engineered formation of a great empire meat corporation—and a steamship line to carry Vestey meats.

"Her salary was $250,000 a year. She traveled the world and learned 12 languages. She set up Vestey meat plants in every country she touched.

"Several times she tried to retire. In 1914 she returned to Superior to be with her mother. But World War One found her organizing a meat industry in Australia. She was said to be the first white woman to travel into Australia's interior.

"She was in Moscow a month during the Red revolution. A delay in arrival made it necessary for her to accept rooms in a hotel other than planned. The next day the hotel holding her original reservations was blown up by revolutionists.

—O—

"Again she returned here after the war ended. Her mother had refused to live in London. So Miss Brodstone became a member of local civic groups, and even managed the local baseball team. Then romance interceded.

"After a succession of cablegrams which kept Superior's little telegraph office busy, she left in 1924 to be married in New York City to Vestey. By that time the Englishman had been knighted.

"Being Lady Evelyn Vestey of Kingswood, London, did not lessen her interest in her home town.

"In memory of her mother, who died in 1924, she gave Superior the Brodstone Hospital in 1927. Joining in the gift was her brother, Louis Brodstone, then editor of a collectors' magazine.

"She gave an addition to Lincoln Park in memory of her brother when he died in 1936. The local museum received a collection she gathered during her world travels.

"Superior High School students still get annual scholarships from a fund set up by Lady Vestey. She arranged for building a badly needed bridge over a nearby creek.

"People here remember too a philanthropy which misfired and reminded the city of her acute sense of business.

"Lady Vestey had given money for a park. But people rejected it and she brought suit for recovery of her money. The suit reached the Nebraska Supreme Court, but never received a hearing, because Lady Vestey meantime won the city's admission that the money rightfully was hers.

"Whereupon she contributed the money—and $17,000 more—to construction of the Brodstone Hospital."

Meissen Porcelains—Boettger the Gold Maker Who Turned Potter

By RENE VON SCHLEINTIZ

Published through the courtesy of the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation, Inc.

A clock framed in Meissen porcelain.
Note the lively and elaborate character of the figures.

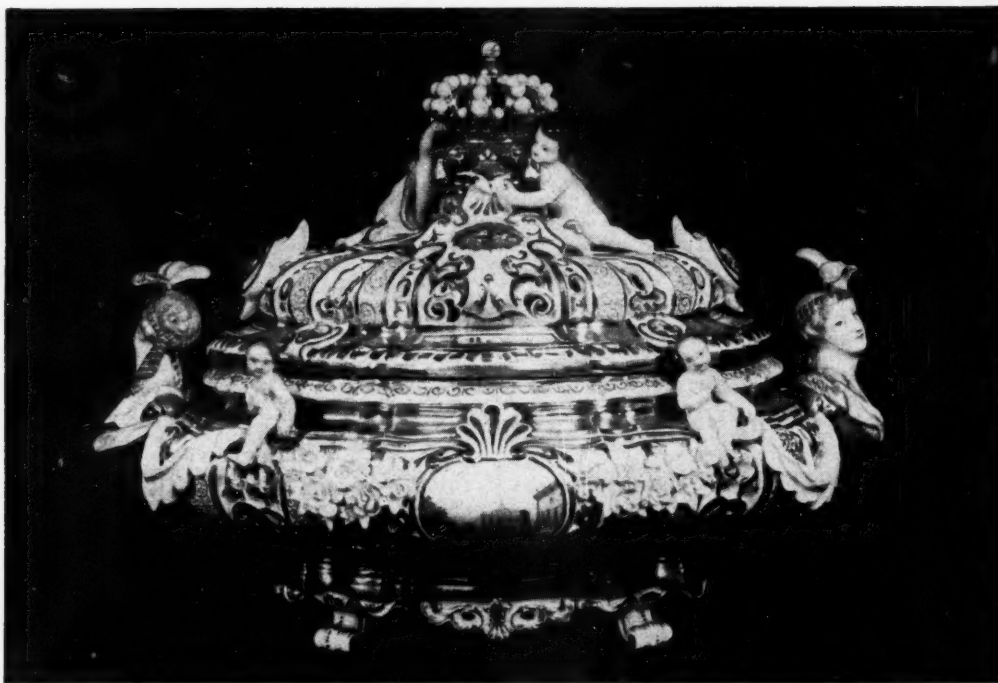

The collecting of porcelain has been one of the passionate avocations of western civilization ever since Marco Polo brought back the knowledge of its existence from his voyage to China in the year 1295. It assumed the proportions of an aristocratic mania in the eighteenth century. August the Strong, Elector of Saxony and King of Poland, who sponsored the first porcelain factory in Europe, was himself one of the most ardent collectors.

Johann Friederich Boettger was an untiring, brilliant research worker, an apprentice to a Berlin apothecary, who devoted himself to the alchemist's dream of making synthetic gold. As the king of Prussia wanted to use him for his own purposes, Boettger fled to Saxony only to jump from the frying pan into the fire. August the Strong had him arrested and kept him for several years under constant supervision. He placed large sums of money at his disposal and granted all his wishes except his desire for freedom. It was a prison of gold.

Boettger's investigations led him finally to the elusive formula for making white porcelain in the year 1709. In January, 1710, the king gave orders for the erection of a porcelain factory. Started at Dresden it was transferred a few months later to its home in the castle of Albrechtsburg in Meissen until the year 1865 when a new factory was built at Meissen where it has been ever since.

At first the factory concentrated only on stoneware. After several years of strenuous work true porcelain was produced. The secrets of manufacture were very closely held. Boettger split the knowledge between two associates so that no one expert would know the whole formula. There was great pressure on the part of various neighbor princes to steal the process and seduce the artists so that rival factories could compete with Meissen porcelain. In spite of a jealous guarding at Meissen, the process was finally betrayed by a disloyal workman who could not resist the handsome promises of foreign agents. Two years after Boettger's death a Meissen foreman joined an enameler, under the importunings of the Austrian minister of war, and established a rival factory in Vienna in 1717.

The first ware produced at Meissen was simple faience. Then followed a reddish brown stone-ware copied from a well-known type of Chinese pottery, produced by mixing red fire-resisting clay with an easily fused fluxing medium. The secret lay in the use of non-fusible fire-resisting clay. The second difficulty was making the glaze. Boettger never quite succeeded in solving the question of the important under-glaze color; especially the under-glaze blue produced from cobalt. The blue was, however successfully produced in 1720, a year after his death. On the other hand, he succeeded, after numerous failures, in discovering various over-glaze colors, some of greatest brilliance. Decorations in gold and silver were already conspicuous during Boettger's period.

The greatest days of Meissen porcelain were during the second quarter of the 18th century. The prosperity of the factory was due largely to the

Figurines of Meissen porcelain which not only reveal consummate skill in manufacture but also capture the costumes and attitudes of the time great genius of two artists, Johann Gregor Herold, painter, and Johann Joachim Kandler, modeller. The exquisite detail and color of the pieces of the period from 1730 to 1740 have never been surpassed. The outstanding genius of Kandler created the characteristic style of Meissen ware in figure modelling so widely copied by other factories on the Continent and in England. The mark of blue crossed swords has identified Meissen porcelain since 1723. There have been many imitators. Imitations are fairly easy to detect not only by the untrue imprint of the pirated mark but also by texture, detail, color and weight of the copied piece.

The production of the Meissen factory can be divided conveniently into nine periods (see page 66).

In making a clay model it required a fine sense of artistic values to visualize the finished figure. The dull clay was a very different medium in which to work compared with the dazzling white surface of the glazed porcelain. Every modeller had to bear in mind that every piece of porcelain contracts one-sixth of its volume during firing and, as a consequence much thought, experience, and talent went into the creation of each piece.

The work of the modeller would have failed if it were not for the clever work of the assembler. It was the assembler with his sensitive hands who undertook to multiply the models. This was done by making hollow molds from the model. The figure or whole group of figures had to be divided into dozens of separate pieces. All these separate parts were copied art. The assembler always had to remember that porcelain has a tendency to collapse in the intense heat of the kiln.

Figures with outstretched arms were always a risk inasmuch as an unsupported arm would probably sag during the firing. If a figure was heavy or if flowing draperies or robes made it bulky, the thin supports would give way in the furnace under weight. This consideration usually led to the use of tree stumps or other ornamental supports.

Meissen during the second half of the 18th century had great difficulties to overcome. Rival factories sprang up like mushrooms all over Germany. Artistically Meissen stood still while other factories realized the importance of keeping up to date. The factory got into serious financial difficulties and had to secure a large grant from the government, cut prices, sell unpainted porcelain and raise money by lotteries in order to survive. A substantial income was had from shooting festivals where the prizes were porcelains.

During this period almost every state proceeded to protect its own manufacture against the import of foreign products. Frederick the Great, who had taken over the Berlin factory in 1763, prohibited the sale of porcelain from Saxony; even its transport through Russia was verboten. Austria, Denmark, Sweden, and Portugal forbade import of Meissen ware entirely, while Russia, France, Spain and England erected tariffs ranging from 50-60% ad valorem against its importation.

Nevertheless, in spite of handicaps

and difficulties Meissen ware has continued in demand. The passion of collecting these objects d'art continues to possess art lovers and connoisseurs. Neither the French Revolution, the industrial changes of the 19th century nor the altered tastes after the first World War could destroy the urge to own Meissen masterpieces. We see in the early manufacture of Meissen the ambition of a king who wanted his factory to make history and, on the other hand, the work of an artist whose genius always outdid the ambition of his master. The inscription that is above the door of Boettger's laboratory at Albrechtsburg is a symbol of his original mood:

"Gott, unser Schopfer, hat gemacht aus dem Goldmacher einen Topfer."

MUSIC BOXES

Offered For Sale by
LLOYD G. KELLEY
 P. O. Box 342, Hanover, Mass.
 Tel. Hanover 127-2

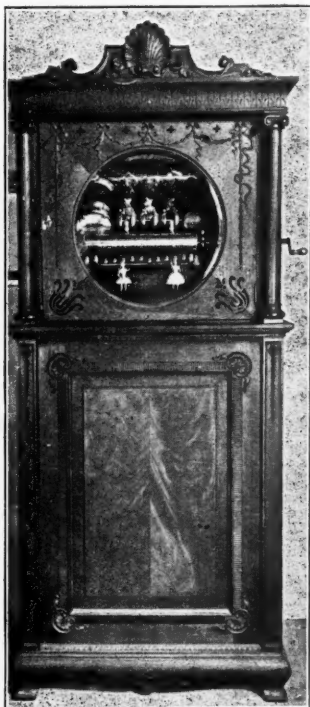

Offered Subject to Prior Sale

All items listed for sale are in perfect mechanical condition, no broken teeth in music comb, no objectionable squeaky noises due to boxes being out of repair, satisfaction guaranteed on all purchases. All merchandise shipped by Railway Express. Charges C.O.D. unless otherwise specified. Send your check in advance with your order. Complete details and further information will be given on any item listed.

140. As pictured, large table music box imported from Switzerland in 1875, made by C. Paillard & Co. Ste. Croix. The six cylinders of this machine are 19 1/4" in length. The two part comb is all original and perfect. The two large spring barrels run the machine for thirty minutes on one winding. The governor fans are geared so that they are very easily adjusted. This table and box are burl walnut finish inlaid with tulipwood and hollyhock. The table is 57" long, 25 1/2" wide, 30" high. The music box is 48" long, 16" wide, 12 1/4" high, drawer for holding extra cylinders. This is one of the finest constructed music boxes I have ever seen, four tunes on a cylinder, which allows for the very desirable fine tooth comb. Price crated and ready for shipment $850.00.
141. Automaton music box, small Swiss box with six bells and three Chinamen bell strikers. Plays eight tunes, comb all perfect, rosewood cabinet inlaid with musical instruments. Price $145.00.
142. As pictured, old penny arcade type music box with dancing dolls. Beautiful mahogany cabinet 6' high, 36" wide, 16" in depth. This machine has four cylinders playing six tunes each. Four combs, all original, all perfect. Drum, six bells, castanet, three Chinamen bell strikers that turn their heads as they strike bells on either side. Price $600.00.
143. Old penny arcade type music box with the same musical works and dolls as in #142. Drum, six bells, castanet, three Chinamen bell strikers, comb and cylinders all perfect. In oak cabinet with glass front 33" long, 24" high, 20" in depth. Price $345.00.

FOR PIPE SMOKERS

The Publisher's Page

We are unable to get kraft wrapping paper in sufficient quantities to mail your magazine. Most of you will be getting them with the name stamped on the back page. You may also get issues with mixed grades of paper and you may get issues with a self-cover.

There is something rotten in Denmark, U.S.A., that a lot of these conditions exist. We waste far more raw material for the making of kraft wrapping paper than we use.

It is said that shiploads of different grades of paper used in every day household use have been shipped all around the world to be given away by U. N. R. A.

We thought when they were giving away stuff in this country that most of it was vote buying but giving away needless stuff all around the world just looks plain crazy.

It also looks to us like the big boys in the publishing business who are doubling their subscription rates and are able to get $4,000 a page for their advertising are working some shenanigans in the supply of paper. When the bust comes let us hope they are holding the bag for plenty. (Only it is the paper mill that is usually holding the bag.)

There ought to be enough established magazines to do for awhile. We are regulating a lot of other things, let the established concerns have their supplies in order to protect their capital investment and their employees' jobs. New ones will have their chance when there is work and material.

We have often thought that if a shipment of paper got mixed up in a truck strike what a fix we would be in.

Paper has been so tightly rationed that it has been impossible to build up a reserve. As our circulation increases and more pages are necessary, we have to scramble around and pick up any odd lots we can find. Often this costs us double expense on the press because we have to use half size sheets, and double work in the bindery. We thought that a year and three months after the war things would be settled down but they are worse today than ever.

Whatever happens we will get out some way. We are resourceful in planning ahead for emergencies. The magazine may be delayed but it will not be long. As you all know by experience, many magazines are going defunct and you lose your money.

HOBBIES has carefully put your money away in the bank to be returned to you in case. It is a reserve and is not ours until we have earned it by delivering your subscription in full.

A man whom I regard as of over average intelligence, offered to bet me that a year from now both paper and labor would be 100% higher. We are already paying 100% more for paper than before the war. That was only a guess on his part but it is not beyond the range of possibilities, the way things are going. We do not know what we would do under such circumstances. We doubt if we could keep up with the cat's tail as it climbed around the pole. In every issue we would have to announce an increase in subscription price and advertising rates. The dealers would be so busy marking up their stock that there would be a shortage of price tags.

—O—

We received many letters regarding that unspeakable outlaw, Art Ritis. The police say they are looking for him in every part of the country. He is a worse cut-throat than Heirrens. He has a sister Arith. When you think you are getting better she pounds you, only a little lighter. Art does the heavy work, usually at night, using a claw hammer and twisting your bones with a pipe wrench.

This stuff is just ol' antique rheumatiz, but it seems to affect someone in every family. It is no respecter of persons. The letters I received would make a readable book. Some must have suffered the tortures of the damned.

One man wrote, "I always heard you had to be onery to get rheumatism and I had you sized up that way." Other letters were humorous to downright funny.

Many of the remedies given were a conglomeration of contradictions, but as a whole they were informative, sympathetic and helpful. Those who had the fortitude to bear it out until nature took its course deserve a lot of credit. They had real courage to withstand such an ordeal. During long and sleepless hours there must have been temptation to reach out for the goofy ball.

I am better now but I recall one of Bryan's favorite stories. As the old lady came downstairs they asked her how she was. She said, "I'm better this morning, but I always feel worse when I'm better, because I know I am going to be worse later."

—O—

Now that New York state is having an election it naturally draws interest from everywhere.

The Republican leadership since the days of Mark Hanna has been very weak. It looks to the average that the aim of the party was to have no policy and do nothing that would offend anybody. That is not what parties are for. Parties are to represent principles.

The general impression is that a handful of reactionaries furnish enough money to control the convention but do not furnish any votes to control the election.

The progressive wing of the party was treated shabbily instead of being welcomed back into the fold. In their mistreatment of Hiram Johnson they lost the presidential election in 1916. This year the important La Follette group expressed willingness to return. They should have been welcomed with open arms. The national leaders realize now that they should have gone into Wisconsin to advise the party leaders there to refrain from putting up another candidate, as an appeal to progressives throughout the country and particularly the large progressive blocks in New York, California, Illinois and other states.

The Democrats have been more willing to give and take to get their dissidents back. In fact, they have so many elements in the party that it looks like a zebra-striped jackass—but they win elections.

One of the unfortunate things that will stalk the Republicans for many years was the permitting of Hamilton Fish to be garrotted. Congressman Fish, coming from an old and distinguished Revolutionary family, did more for the Republican party than any individual in it.

Elected from Roosevelt's own district he kept being reelected when most all Republicans everywhere were rubbed out at the polls. As Roosevelt's power grew he became more and more embarrassed and incensed at Fish beating him among his neighbors.

Mr. Fish was a wise statesman. He wanted to nominate Borah in 1936 instead of Landon. Mr. Landon would have made a peerless president but was no candidate comparable to Mr. Borah. How much different things might have been!

He deserved the full, united support of the party, but it remained for a Republican governor to make a deal with a motly and blatant minority, who never were Republicans, to double-cross and defeat a great and winning party leader. No wonder the average Republican going about his business thought it was an unprincipled, an inexcusable, and a dirty thing to do. That is why great numbers of Republicans in their strongholds thruout the State of New York stayed away from the polls at the presidential election to make the result in that state what it was. And right now reports are heard far beyond the borders of the Empire State of how this same group is trading votes to put their man Lehman in for Senator and repay Mr. Dewey for his perfidy by reelecting him for Governor. It is a sorry mix-up the voter is up against in New York. They are short of many necessities even including toilet tissue but the warehouses of Trieste and Jerusalem are full, where Mr. Lehman left it.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

The first Highway Post Office operated by a contract carrier began service September 9 between Union, Miss., and Mobile, Ala.

The contract was awarded to the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company at $30,000 annually. The company furnishes the necessary equipment and drivers and bears the cost of operation and maintenance. The route is 182.9 miles in length and the contract provides for one round trip daily except Sunday.

More highway post offices will be established as equipment becomes available, according to Gael E. Sullivan, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who has supervision over the transportation of mail. Highway post offices transport the mails in localities where there is no train service or where such service is inadequate to meet the needs of the public. Mail is picked up and delivered at post offices and is sorted on the vehicle enroute by postal personnel in the same manner as on railway postal cars.

The Postal Service began highway post office operations in 1941 when a route was established between Washington, D. C., and Harrisonburg, Va. This proved so successful that additional routes were established the same year between Indianapolis and South Bend, Ind., and between San Francisco and Pacific Grove, Calif. Due to shortages of equipment, the Department was unable to add new routes until now.

A special cachet was placed on philatelic mail transported over the route on the first day of operation.

To meet the decrease in air-mail postage rates, effective October 1, 1946, a new 5-cent air-mail postage stamp, and an embossed 5-cent air-mail stamped envelope, were first placed on sale at Washington, D. C., on September 25, 1946.

The 5-cent air-mail postage stamp is of special-delivery size, arranged horizontally, printed by rotary process in red, and issued in sheets of 50 subjects.

Vatican City Collector

One of the most important collections of stamps of the Vatican City is owned by Mrs. B. E. Kuzendorf, Chicago. The collection grew out of the remnants of her father's collection, found 10 years ago in a cabinet after his death.

Beginning with the stamp issued in 1929 commemorating the treaty between Pius XI. and Mussolini establishing the Vatican City, her collection includes such issues as the International Juridica congress stamps, the Catholic Press conference, the stamp surcharged "Sede Vacante" used for two days following the death of Pope Pius XI., the coronation stamp of Pope Pius XII., the stamp commemorating the 19th centenary of the redemption of man in 1933, and the recent conference of the college of cardinals.

The latter stamps she obtained thru the assistance of Cardinal Stritch. Before his recent trip to Rome to receive the red hat of a cardinal, she wrote Archbishop Stritch asking that he send her some stamps from the Vatican City. The letter was turned over the Msgr. J. Gerald Kealy of Chicago and later referred to a resident of Italy from whom she received the stamps.

Mrs. Kuzendorf is president of the Chicago Woman's Stamp Club and chairman of the women's division of the Society of Philatelic Americans.

Firm Helps Wounded

Stamps For The Wounded got a big helping hand when the A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company, Illinois, launched a campaign advertising its patented new extra-sweet syrup, "Sweetose."

The campaign drew more than 500,000 replies from magazine readers in its first six months. The postcards on envelopes carrying the replies, together with Staley's other U. S. and foreign mail during the past two years, has totalled between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 covers.

The covers are turned over by Staley's to Paul Robertson of Decatur, Ill., where the big corn and soybean processing plant is situated, and then forwarded by him to veterans' hospitals in the Midwest. There they are distributed among wounded veterans who become collectors with the assistance of the national Stamps For The Wounded organization, of which Ernest A. Kehr, New York, is chairman.

IT SEEMS TO ME

By FRANK L. COES

Stamp Examination

The story about the collector using Christmas tree lights for stamp examination is constructive, but the better way is a single small standard lamp under a shade, the light being allowed to show through changeable glass strips of various colors. The reason for not using the smaller bulbs is that there are still many such that are not of high quality and they burn out without visible reason. Indeed many of the Japanese made lights still exist in five and dime stores. A standard voltage lamp lasts longer and is easier to handle. 25 c. p. is enough.

Renewed Interest

There is a renewed interest in the Pre-World War I issues of Germany beginning with Thurn & Taxis. And strangely too, although that has been said before, there does not seem to be such a great supply. There are plenty of "almosts" and "space-fillers" and if the collector has enough he can cull the best of these, but the top grades of many issues are woefully scarce.

The collector who says he depends on "old collections" made at the time, is a hopeful and patient person, but he is not shifting many such to his own collection. They all seem to have faults.

A recent collection was hinged with strips of envelope flaps, and in over a hundred copies not a dozen were fit to preserve. That is a high percentage. The first thing to do is remove those bad hinges, and the chances of having whole items afterward are not too good. But better do it, and hope hard.

The various "pre-Imperial" sections of the various German Districts and Confederations are still not too well studied, or known.

But this fuss is making interest, and because the propaganda peddlers do tell one thing right "great stocks were destroyed," the collectors who have these are working feverishly to fill, to select and improve and finally the goal of completeness will depend on their financial or trading ability. But it will pay, both in knowledge and in values.

Strange Topicals

Tales of "strange" topicals always interest. Several seem to have intrigued other writers this month. Perhaps some are in the shadow zone where the "regular" collectors place those that seem to be "more literary than philatelic." Now that is a poor criticism. First, because there is no established rule, and such collections might well fall under the approving eye of judges as "well written up."

Second, because the owner may well have a better collection, plus the writing, than the griping kicker who "writes only numbers."

Again comes the need for telling such kickers that the collection topical, specialized, highly selected and with technical variants is still the collection of someone who has a right to do as he wishes with what he owns. And the griping and kicking about it being "literature and not Philately" is just the kicker's opinion, often not at all good if we make comparisons.

It is unasked for, impolite and definitely does not improve the temper of the one criticized.

And, just to make it obvious, if judges at various exhibitions had not approved the mixtures (alleged) of Literature and Philately, we should have lost a great and lasting comfort to many. Especially the old, retired, chair or bedridden collectors.

As one old lady (32 years in her chair) said, "I don't mind that talk, but it is sort of silly and it is not his business."

So topicals have a place, even if the trade in spots, and some smart collectors do not like the method.

Stamp Foundation Acquires Two Noted Collections

The famous Luff reference collection has been turned over to the Philatelic Foundation, Inc., New York, N. Y., by Hugh M. Scott, former owner of Scott Publications, Inc.

This magnificent gift represents the life-long study of John N. Luff, who was unquestionably one of the world's greatest philatelic students. The collection was kept right up-to-date with loving care by Hugh M. Clark as a monument to the memory of Mr. Luff. It contains a vast amount of valuable material, not only in genuine stamps but in reprints and forgeries so necessary for comparison. A collection of this kind is absolutely essential for an Expert Committee, and its value cannot be over-estimated.

The Foundation has also acquired by gift, the famous ten-volume collection of Cuba, formed by Samuel L. Israel. The collection is complete, used and unused, with many covers, blocks and sheets. It contains many outstanding items, such as a vertical pair showing both types of the "Y $\frac{1}{4}$ " surcharge on part of cover, an original proof of the first setting of the 2c Puerto Principe surcharges, as well as a very fine range of these issues, splendid combination covers showing Cuban and U. S. stamps, all of the inverted centers in singles and blocks, booklet panes, and many rare cancellations.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

Medals As Custodians of History

Now that numismatism has become a source of study instead of a mere collecting fad, medals have achieved a "place in the sun." They furnish a more detailed and varied information of places, events and people than do coins; unhampered by so much red-tape, and issued also by private individuals, societies and institutions they cover a wider range. Almost every subject of special importance is recorded on medals; industrial, scientific, musical, medicinal, governmental. Our early Indian medals, much coveted by collectors perpetuate the history of the red man. Taken collectively, medals furnish a condensed but almost complete history of America in all its phases. A paper, condensed and edited, read before the New Zealand Numismatic Society, is of much interest: "Commemorative medals are almost permanent keys to history, and miniature mirrors of contemporary art. Records of great events, outstanding leaders, and stages of progress are usually reflected in the designs. The collecting of medals is a fascinating hobby for the lover of history or art. War medals are steeped in history. Admittedly medals did not go as deeply into the roots of history as did coins—which in the classical Greek and Roman times were really medallic archives—but commemorative medals were issued spontaneously by learned societies or public bodies, and therefore reflected opinion in a much wider field than was possible by purely government issues. The likeness of most great men are perpetuated on medals and coins. The portraits were usually associated with the related historic events so that the collector can, in turning over his medals, appreciate the association at a glance and quickly span the historical highlights of the past. By handling a medal or coin that has survived for centuries one can feel more intimately associated with the peoples and events of those times than is possible merely from reading the cold pages of a history book. It has been said that the history of any country was the history of its great men.

Unlike coins, medals are not intended to circulate or to be stacked, and therefore they are usually much larger and the designs invariably in much higher relief. That gives the artist a freer rein, and more strikingly beautiful designs result. The commemorative medals in many respects exceed the coin in historical value in that the medals record all kinds of events, including wars, treaties of peace, rebellions, constitutional and social changes, discoveries, Royal births, marriages and coronations; portraits of queens, princes, princesses, and pretenders appear on medals but not usually on coins. Medals depict portraits of many great statesmen, scientists, artists, bishops, authors, architects and painters, and one must not omit the admirals, generals and navigators. The arts of peace, and what might be called public works, are amply represented on medals, including the opening of canals, railways, harbours and public buildings.

Money in Those Stocking

When you empty that old "stocking" of its family heirlooms so that you may during the present hose shortage use it instead of going bobby-sox, be sure to take an inventory of all the coins and paper money relics placed there by some grand-sire. You may find a fortune. Many rare monies are "soaked" away. Harry H. Brown's (Tecumseh, Kansas) grandfather in 1859 bought a $100 Kansas territory bond. The bond calls for 10% interest, and matured on January 1, 1865. However, before date of maturity the Kansas legislature declared the bonds invalid. The original buyer probably tossed the invalidated bond into the family heirloom sock and forgot it. The $100 bond with 10% compound interest is now worth, if valid, about $400,000. Suit will very likely be brought basing claim that the legislature had no authority to repudiate the debt.

Inventory the coins and paper bills in that old family sock, have them appraised by a competent numismatist; perhaps you will find a very valuable "sleeper."

Technics Versus Ethics

Technically certain dealers were correct in stating in their advertisements that they would pay fabulous sums for certain coins, but ethically they were incorrect in implying the rarities could be found in every-day change; it was just a "come-on" for selling catalogues at from 10 to 50 cents per "come". Thanks to the widespread information given out by the hundred or more coin clubs, and through the columns of HOBBIES and other coin publications, these misleading advertisements are diminishing. It is safe to follow the experienced collectors' dictum, "there are no rarities in circulation". A flaring advertisement would appear: "Will pay $1,000 for a 1913 nickel", but the advertisement failed to state it was a 1913 Liberty head one, that there were only six minted, and that none of these six coins were in circulation. And the same with other like coins. There are many large responsible, high grade dealers issuing and selling legitimate catalogues, not only giving the prevailing prices of the many coins, but giving a history of coins and coinage, and every collector should secure one as it is of much help to him. There is no "come-on" or "catch" in them; They are intelligently prepared, and intended for information to collectors to help them in buying coins, and not for the sole purpose of selling the book. They are a great help both to the buyer of coins and the seller of the catalogue.

Besides the 1913 Liberty head nickel mentioned above some of the other "come-on" coins are of equal interest:

1894 S dime. Only 24 struck. The very few now in the hands of collectors show no wear, so the probability is none of them was placed in circulation.

1804 Dollar. Only about six known to be in existence and all accounted for.

1884 and 1885 Trade Dollars. Both unprocurable. Only ten 1884 struck, and only five of the 1885.

1866 Quarter. (without motto "In God We Trust") It is believed that only one of these mottoless quarters is in existence, and its ownership known.

Half Dollars. 1838 O Mint. So far as known only about six of this date and Mint. And only two 1853 half dollars without rays and arrows.

And what chance has a collector in picking up a Carson City Mint 1876 twenty cent piece when there are only about six of them known; a good "bait" for "suckers".

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD COLLECTOR

By THOMAS ELDER

O.P.A. Bust and Coins

In the midst of politics and confusion at Washington, D. C., I have heard collectors ask, "How is elimination, temporarily or permanently of O. P. A. going to affect coin and paper money prices?"

The O. P. A. is said, at one time to have had 34,000 employees. That would be 9,000 over our entire standing army at the time of the Spanish-American War. It was then 25,000 men. Surely such a body for the people to support is no light matter.

Whatever may come, and we have already some hints of big advances in the cost of meat, butter and coffee, it is pretty certain coins will not keep up with that sort of a procession. Coins and paper money will still remain comparatively cheap and for a long time to come in the writer's opinion. This much is certain, if prices advance much more there are going to be a big lot of strikes, which will add to our already plagued family and business lives. During the war we had not quite as bad a situation in respects as now. Laws are weighed down with so many amendments nobody is suited, and the bills get vetoed. In the midst of it all collectors should remain calm and go about their business in the regular way. If prices advance among them the advance will be orderly.

Stellas in 1879.

A Tale of the Halcyon Days

When the late Henry Chapman died about eight years ago the country was robbed not only of a very interesting character but also deprived of an untold number of remarkable coin stories. Having known Mr. Chapman for many years I heard him tell first hand a few of those stories. One concerns the Stella, the $4 set which came out in 1879. Some individual supposed it would be a good idea to make up this four dollar gold set consisting of the well known four dollar piece (which is selling for over $400 per,) and the gold and gold-metric international silver dollars. Congressmen each got one in that year 1879. There were crass unsentimental people in congress then as now with the result that a great many startled at once to unload, cash in, on their set of three coins for whatever they would bring; in fact in a few cases, at $5.50 per set of 50c under face value. This is not an idle dream on my part.

Henry Chapman told me he used to sell the entire set of three for $7 or a dollar over what he paid for it, and many sets were offered under ten dollars the set and for sometime afterwards. Well the writer sold a proof $4 once for $45 in the year 1903 at Pittsburgh to an old G.A.R. man who dealt in coins.

If the writer had been able to have held even his cents of 1908 and 1909 from the years they came out instead of selling them, or keeping them to have a large proportion stolen from his safes, it would have paid him a lot better. But if the same appreciation on coins happens in the future as in the past there are quite a few coins around today, among them I might mention large and small U. S. cents and half cents, which it would pay anybody to hold. And I don't mean the mint-marked small cents being sold in about car load lots today. The immense coinage is unsurmountable, due to press of numbers struck, I refer to the large cents, of all dates, and to particularly the Indian head cents which many are rare in only fair condition, and seldom seen among the hundreds of Indian cents being hoarded today. Do not be deceived by the apparent slowness of the advance in some coin values, for in other lines they take sudden and unexplainable jumps upward and without warning. In 1879, the days of the $4 gold issue, 1856 cents were still selling at from $1.50 to $2 apiece and proofs for five dollars. Private gold coins, which have since sold for $800 were bringing $1.50 over their face value. This was true down to 1885 or later. Money had a much larger value, but it was many years afterwards that large U. S. cents by the hundred sold for over $1.50 to $1.75. The writer paid $2 per hundred to Henry Chapman as late as 1910, eagle cents for $2 per 100 also, and he was glad to get the business. Wm. P. Brown was busily accumulating hundreds of uncirculated and proof U. S. small cents each year as issued. The collectors of those days liked tokens, cents and half cents.

Other things such as patterns and late issues of U. S. coins attracted very slight notice among collectors. They were a small coterie, a busy lot in their way but their vision was narrow and limited. Today things are different. A man can market any kind of a coin just so it is a coin. It has a market price, and since tens of thousands have been added to the ranks of collectors this is apt to continue indefinitely. One of the most astonishing things is the growth of dealers from a small number to a small army as of today.

The good old halcyon days for the bargain hunter have gone, and competition remains keen. However, do not be discouraged if you market coins. It was less than two years ago that nice uncirculated $20 gold coins were offered right and left for $39 apiece. Their price in one big city today is $64 to $65. From this you will see that there are opportunities to be had for a profit, even if the day of $5 Stellas has gone forever.

High Prices for Gold Dollars

At a recent big sale in New York, the following prices were realized for a few leading U. S. gold coins. This sale brought a big total.

Gold Dollars: 1849, first year, $16. Not a rare coin at all. 1863, proof, $160. 1864, proof, $100. 1865, proof, $160. 1867, proof, $40. 1871, proof, $40. 1880, proof, $50.

COIN FORUM

Answer

In reply to the question asked sometime ago by Mrs. C. E. Wharton about the "thirty pieces of silver" which was given to Judas for the betrayal of Christ, the following information comes from our old family Bible.

Sidetes granted Simon Maccabaeus a license to coin money in B. C. 140; and it is generally understood that the oldest Jewish silver coins belong to this period. They are shekels and half shekels weighing 220 and 110 grains respectively. The "thirty pieces of silver" promised to Judas probably denote shekels, which were worth 50 cents each.—Gladys Willard, New Jersey.

"Paper Pennies"

An Associated Press item from Boise, Idaho, calls attention to paper pennies which have been in the limelight in that city recently.

It is stated that "About 300,000 of the paper one-cent pieces were issued three years ago by the Boise Chamber of Commerce to cope with the shortage of copper coins resulting from sales tax demands."

E. G. Harlan, an official, said not more than $10 worth have been redeemed. They were sought by collectors.

Based on Spanish Dollar

The name "dollar" was adopted by Congress in 1785 for the monetary unit of United States currency because the Spanish dollar was the chief unit of money circulating in the colonies.

CLUBS

Fresno, Calif., has a newly organized Coin Club known as San Joaquin Valley Coin Club. Meetings are held the second Tuesday evening of each month in the Hotel California.

IN "BLOOM".

In the United States we call it "Uncirculated condition" in New Zealand they call it "Bloom condition". Mr. Allan Sutherland, Secretary of the New Zealand Numismatic Society, very kindly furnished some very interesting information regarding the conditions of coins in New Zealand. Quoting him:—

The term "Bloom" is commonly used among numismatists here as a synonym for "Brilliant" or "Mint" condition. We live at the opposite end of the world from the London Royal Mint where our coins are minted, and as the coins we import are placed in calico bags and then boxed, there is plenty of opportunity for abrasion and scratching; further, at times are tarnished when they arrive, due probably to changes in temperature. It will be seen therefore that an "uncirculated" coin in the U.S.A. could be reasonably good, while an uncirculated coin in New Zealand could be far from good. In fact, when I select new specimens from uncirculated coins I often reject 95% or more. We use the term "Proof" as you do, for coins specially struck from polished dies or otherwise specially processed at the Mint.

At our last meeting a suggestion was made that a commemorative medal should be issued to commemorate the stay in New Zealand of U. S. Marines and other U. S. A. forces, to mark their sacrifices at Tarawa whence they went from this city (Wellington, New Zealand).

Feather Currency. Baskets to the Indian squaws were what pans are to the housewives, a household must. Indian basket-makers became very adept at their trade. The Oregon Indian decorated their baskets with the bright plumage of the wood-pecker, and wood-pecker feathers became a medium of exchange as acceptable and as adaptable as the beads of the wampum. Catching wood-peckers for the basket workers proved a veritable mint. F. C. R.

The Pennsylvania Flintlock Rifle

By BILL KANE

Quakers have usually been good business men, sound, forthright, relaxed and dependable. William Penn, truly great man because he believed in the essential, eventual rightness of humanity, was a great religious leader and a great business man. When he settled his father, Admiral Sir William Penn's $80,000 claim against Charles II, for a grant in America, he was moved first by the idea of providing a refuge in which the persecuted of all religions could be free. Good business sense dictated that agents be sent among the persecuted to tell them about Pennsylvania.

By 1685, the Wends, of the Elbe River, first (in point of time) of the minorities persecuted in what is now Germany, the Moravians, Lutherans, Quakers, Schwenkfelders, Dunkards, Amish, Mennonites, Huguenots, and others in England, Holland, Germany, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Sweden, Scotland, Wales and Ireland knew the facts, and more, about William Penn's colony. Incidentally it should be noted that the name Pennsylvania was not bestowed in honor of William Penn, who sincerely deprecated worldly honors, but was given in honor of his father, Admiral Penn, by the British King.

What quality distinguishes the persecuted? Inevitably he acquires strength through resistance. What leads a man to throw off outworn ideas? The possession of good judgment makes a man abhor vacuous conventionalities, political and religious. The middle class craftsman, the skilled artisan, the trained worker begins with mental discipline. The peoples who were pulled to Pennsylvania by William Penn's agents, were men of parts and arts.

Some writers on American antiques are provincial demagogues. These write as if the "foreigners" who came to this country to make the useful and beautiful objects that we call antiques, dropped all their European habits, instincts and skills into the Atlantic when half way over. Such gentry impose limitations that are nonsensical. The man accustomed to make furniture of oak found oak to his liking in America, and doubtless used it for much of the first furniture made in this hemisphere. He turned to white pine, maple, walnut and poplar only after he had an opportunity to become familiar with these woods and their working qualities. The pewterer surely made some porringers with two handles, as he had in Europe, though scarcity of tin and copper impelled him to make more with only one handle. The gunsmith, to get to the artisan whose accomplishments weigh heavily in the history of free men in America, made muskets like the Charleville, the Jaeger, the Brown Bess and other guns he had known in his old home. But the alert, venturesome comers to Pennsylvania in the late 1600's and early 1700's reacted intelligently to their new environment, and soon were making firearms better fitted to their new abode.

Before proceeding to detail the history of the Pennsylvania flintlock rifle that gave some of Washington's soldiers superior mobility and fire power, the paradox that in the colony where every attempt was made to live at peace with all men, red or white, the paradox that a most efficient deadly weapon was developed will be considered. I am not belittling the gunsmiths of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut New York and the other colonies, but these were few and they were not subjected to the customer pressure that bore upon the Pennsylvania smiths. By 1720 the population of Pennsylvania was much greater than that of any other colony. No tendency to feudal dependence upon authority animated most of the Pennsylvania colonists. The diversity of national and religious backgrounds acted to preserve individuality, other than to promote mass acceptance of mediocre ideas in furniture, guns and other utilities of living. Though the Quakers did knowingly encourage the settling upon the frontiers of Pennsylvania of Scotch-Irish, Welsh and Huguenot immigrants to provide Philadelphia and nearby communities with a bulwark of men given to fighting back when attacked, the truth is that the instinct of self-preservation moved even the most religious of Penn's colonists, so that in emergency even Quakers bore arms. But the long slopes and great distances opened by the waterways of Pennsylvania invited to adventure and conquest. The weapon needed to kill game and to fight on equal terms with hostile Indians naturally developed in the environment that most needed it.

The long American rifle originated in Pennsylvania. Most of these rifles were made by Pennsylvania gunsmiths. All the important changes that turned the clumsy Jaeger into the efficient arms used by Washington's riflemen to pick off British officers in battles from the siege of Boston in 1775 to the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown in 1781 were the work of Pennsylvania smiths. Apprentices of Pennsylvania craftsmen migrated to frontiers in the Carolinas, Virginia, Tennessee, Ohio, Kentucky and even Missouri, and these men, sons of Pennsylvania, made most of the fine rifles cherished by owners everywhere. I venture to assert that it is time to drop the misnomer, Kentucky rifle, and give the arm its rightful name. To press the point that Dan'el Boone made the rifle famous in the dark and bloody ground that was colonial Kentucky, leads a writer who takes the least care to authenticate his facts to conclude that Boone's use of the rifle was not greater than its use by scores of other patriots, and that to get down to cases, Boone's connection with the exploration and settlement of Kentucky was indeed limited. Furthermore, the term Kentucky is applied, with some measure of exactness, to two other, later guns.

I do not wish to belittle Captain Dillin's and Kendrick Scofield's "The Kentucky Rifle," but I wish it had never been thought necessary to labor to make a connection of the Pennsylvania rifle with Boone and Kentucky, and I should like to see Captain Dillin and a qualified writer given to careful research make an entirely new work on the rifle in early America. I am grateful to everyone who had anything to do with the writing and publication of Captain Dillin's book, because it does give a splendid beginning to thought and expression regarding the Pennsylvania rifle.

Captain Dillin records the existence of a Pennsylvania flintlock dated 1728. By this time many important improvements testify to the ability of early gunsmiths to respond intelligently to environmental needs. (Here I can't help philosophizing: Intelligent reaction to environment marks the upward course of civilization, and the sun of intelligence still shines on the world.)

The range and accuracy of the rifle were increased by lengthening the barrel, by careful boring and rifling, by use of a hexagonal or octagonal barrel, by improving the sights, by shrewd balancing of the piece, lock, stock and barrel, and by evolving the greased leather bullet patch.

Thus the fire power of the Pennsylvania rifle became superior to that of the American Indian's bow and arrow, to the best of European muskets and to the finest military arm, English, French or German that Britain was able to obtain for its own troops or the mercenaries it employed in the War for American Independence.

Powder and lead were scarce and expensive in colonial days. These had to be used sparingly. The calibre of the rifle was small, was made very little more than half of the musket of 1700. From a pound of lead the American rifleman cast three times as many bullets as the owner of a Jaeger musket. The charge of powder necessary to discharge this small bullet was much lighter. The rifle-man's bullet was just as deadly, because its velocity and accuracy were greater. The American hunter and soldier was not weighed down by the terrific weight of his gun, which was at least six pounds lighter, nor by the great weight of powder and bullets he had to carry. The hunter travelled great distances with ease, and the soldier moved quickly to the attack. In many a Revolutionary skirmish Hessian soldiers armed with what was thought to be a superior weapon never saw the buckskin clad patriots who shot them down.

The advantage of rifling a gun barrel was an early Swiss or German discovery. The notable American contribution to the rifle was the evolution of the greased bullet patch. I have searched vainly for any record of prior use in Europe of bullet patch or compartment in the stock. The use of the greased patch made quick loading a possibility. The patch made a bullet of smaller calibre fit easily and tightly into a barrel of larger size. A .36 calibre bullet fitted a .40 calibre Pennsylvania rifle. The saving of lead was great. The velocity of the bullet was increased, and if the patch was properly cut there was no loss of accuracy.

Seldom are two Pennsylvania rifles exactly alike. Most of them were made to order, were the result of the buyer's collaboration with the gunsmith. Most early Pennsylvania rifles are full stock, that is the wood of the stock is continuous under the entire length of the barrel to the muzzle. Most have hexagonal or octagonal barrels, the length of which is usually about 43". Most are rifles. Most are beautiful, well balanced arms. Most have bullet patch compartments in the stock, with brass covers. Most have brass fittings. Many have set triggers, with beautiful, strong guard. Most have stocks of maple, though walnut and pine were used. Sometimes a pine stock was given the appearance of curly maple by binding a tarred rope around the wood and setting it on fire. I have heard it said that this practice was invented by dealers. This is not so. Some fine old rifles have lovely burnt stripe stocks, and these are well esteemed by collectors. These are very scarce in original flintlock condition. Locks were made of wrought iron. An occasional rifle turns up with brass barrel. Some excellent specimens have locks bearing the names of British makers. Many fine smiths made no locks. Some makers marked their barrels. Many rifles are unmarked.

Unfortunately and naturally most flintlocks were altered to percussion when the cap was perfected and became easy to buy. "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, Nor yet the last to put the old aside." If I had been a youth in Pennsylvania in the early 1830's I think I would have had my flintlock altered to percussion. The original Pennsylvania flintlock is rare. It is almost priceless. A buyer pays what he has to for one. Flintlocks altered to percussion cost from $18 up, depending upon condition, beauty of design, ornaments and whether or not a piece is marked with maker's name. Rifles altered from flint to percussion and lately changed back to flint are scarce, and I have not recently seen one for sale for less than $75 in a dealer's stock.

Next to a gun and carved powder horn of the Revolutionary period I place high in interest in a long Pennsylvania flintlock that served its colonist owner in time of need. I once chanced on a quotation from a document penned by a Quaker in 1777. I do not have it available for exact quotation. The gist of the Quaker's statement is important: His son might have a rifle for hunting and for self preservation, but he was told never to forget that it was not an engine of destruction. I do not have to add that I was born in Pennsylvania, of a mixed lot of ancestors, including an American Indian, and that all my schooldays I walked in the shadow of the figure of William Penn that tops the old City Hall in Philadelphia. I am enthusiastic about every object that speaks of the skilled, determined, beauty loving men who followed Penn to his grant in North America.

Ozark Collection

Comes fall and the tired office worker, particularly in the Middle West often turns his thoughts, if not

HERE WE ARE ON CAPE COD. Trade is brisk and new stuff comes in every day. That's a break, too. Guns are scarce, and it's nice to be able to say that this list is better than ever. Of course, the way to keep things rolling is to do a little trading. What do you say fellow, let loose of some of those extras. Remember, there are only so many of the old guns and a lot of new collectors need your duplicates. Six cents in stamps gives you a whack at some nice pieces. If you're on the Cape we're right on.

his footsteps, to the Ozark country of the southwest where life does not have that hurried atmosphere of the city.

News coming to HOBBIES from month to month indicates that there are many hobbyists in this section with many gems and minerals collectors in evidence. As might be expected also there are many Indian relic collectors, because the Red Man found this section of the country to his liking and pitched his tepee along the river banks, by the springs and amidst the hills, leaving unconsciously many relics for the White Man.

Nor is the firearms hobby forgotten in this wordly paradise. Down in Berryville, Arkansas, lives 83-year old Colonel Burton Saunders, crack rifleman, with upwards of 3,000 pieces in his firearms collection.

One of the largest collection of guns in the world is owned by John Davis, mayor of Claremore, Oklahoma, and proprietor of the Hotel Mason there.

SOUTHWEST COLLECTION

One of the largest collections of guns in the world, housed in the Hotel Mason, Claremore, Oklahoma, was recently featured in the Universal short subject, headlined by and titled "Front Line Artists". The owner of this arsenal is John Davis, proprietor of the Hotel in the town which is famous as the home of the late Will Rogers.

Mr. Davis has spent fifty years scouring the earth to amass the collection which includes more than 2,500 firearms of all descriptions, none of which is duplicated. He says that he once negotiated for the purchase of "Big Bertha", the long range German gun that shelled Paris during World War I, but abandoned the idea when his wife demurred.

The collection of weapons started when, as a boy, Mr. Davis was offered a gun by his father as a bribe to take his medicine. It now includes some of the rarest and oldest specimens in the world. Mr. Davis has been mayor of Claremore for 14 years but avers that he never uses his guns to enforce the law. Nevertheless, the film's commentator says that it would be a terrible thing to have the genial mayor of Claremore gunning for you.

Mostly about Books

The Forerunner of the Modern Book Review

By JOHN LAKMORD WAYNE

The idea of abstracting books may be traced to Photius of Greece about 890 A. D. In his "Myribiblion," he preserved summaries of the works he had perused. The "Journal des Scavans" established in Paris in 1665, however seems to have been the forerunner of the modern book review or critical journal. Denis de Sallo, Counsellor of the Parliament of Paris, was the founder of this famous French periodical, a twelve-page weekly, issued on Mondays. The first number was issued on January 5, 1665.

Some students of periodical literature believe that this French magazine, which is known to have influenced the English periodicals of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries, may in turn have been inspired by the "Erbauliche Monatsunterredungen," published in Germany by Johann Rist in 1663, or it may have been influenced by the "Paris Gazette" and by the reports of Theophraste Renaudot's "Bureau d'adresse" (1633-42).

In 1663, Francois de Mazeray, the historian, obtained permission to publish a literary periodical but it died still-born. De Sallo took up the idea and published his first essay in the name of Sieur de Hedouville, his footman. Was this a mere stroke of humor, or designed to insinuate that the freedom of his criticism could only be allowed to his footman? It permitted his writing in a tone often tart and stinging. The work, however, met with so favorable a reception, that Sallo had the satisfaction of seeing it, the following year, imitated throughout Europe, and his "Journal," at the same time, translated into various languages.

But as most authors lay themselves open to an acute critic, the animadversions of Sallo were given with such asperity of criticism, and such malignity of wit, that this new journal excited loud murmurs, and the most heart-moving complaints. The learned had their plagiarisms detected, and the wit had his claims disputed. Many loudly declaimed against this new species of imperial tyranny, and this attempt to regulate the public opinion by that of an individual. Sallo, after having published only his thirteenth number (March 30), felt the irritated wasps of literature thronging so thick about him, that he very gladly abdicated the throne of criticism. The journal is said to have suffered a short interruption by a remonstrance from the nuncio of the Pope, for the energy with which Sallo had defended the liberties of the Gallican church.

Intimidated by the fate of Sallo, his successor, Abbe Gallois, flourished in a milder reign. He contented himself with giving the titles or books, accompanied with extracts; and he was more useful than interesting. The public, who had been so much amused by the raillery and severity of the founder of this dynasty of new critics, now murmured at the want of that salt and acidity by which they had relished the fugitive coalition. They were not satisfied in having the most beautiful, or the most curious parts of a new work brought together; they wished for the unreasonable entertainment of railing and raillery. At length another objection was conjured up against the review; mathematicians claimed they were neglected to make room for experiments in natural philosophy; the historian sickened over works of natural history; the antiquaries would have nothing but discoveries of manuscripts or fragments of antiquity. In a word, each reader wished only to have accounts of books which were interesting to his profession or his taste.

But a review is a work presented to the public at large, and written for more than one country. In spite of all these difficulties the review continued and its index for the first century occupied ten quarto volumes.

Abbe de la Roque, who had formerly assisted Abbe Gallois, took up the editorship in 1675. In 1686, President Cousin took over, and from 1701 to 1792 it was edited by a commission of men of letters. It was suppressed during the Revolution and remained inactive until Napoleon was defeated. It was revived again in 1816 and continued under government patronage and later received the support of the Institute. It is still in progress.

Alger

Roy Smith, Columbus, Ohio, discovered an interesting fact when searching through his Pictorial Magazine, Vol. 2, 1849. He found two articles, one a poem and one in prose by Horatio Alger, Jr., respectively "Voices of the Past" and Chivalry."

Mr. Smith says that as far as he knows Horatio Alger, Jr. the prolific writer for boys, wrote these articles at about the age of 15.

INDIAN RELICS

Rare Flint Arrow Points From Northern Alaska

By ALLEN BROWN

The "socalled" Alaskan "Bear Point," ranging in size from about one inch long to about four inches long in possibly the most specialized arrow head found on this continent. From a recent collection of 175, nine-tenths proved to be of fine quality, of the true "parallel edge-dorsal ridge" type, having a diamond shaped cross section. The balance are in four types as shown in the first two rows, left group of illustration.

A great many of these points are of "Yuma-like" quality and type, that is, the "socalled" collateral type Yuma. A great many show definite serration as well as slight notches near base.

About one-half of this collection are of true flint, ranging in color from greenish gray to coal black, one-fourth are of translucent Novaculite and Chalcedony, the balance of one-fourth are of Jasper and Quartzite, red, brown, mottled jasper and gray to black quartzite, occasionally green nephrite is found in them.

It is rare to see a tin point from this locality. Most all have a short stemmed base, very little, if any barb, long slender diamond shaped body. A rugged point, made for service, yet, infinite care was taken in the flaking to achieve the perfect and symmetrical outline.

ALONG THE TRAIL

The Cherokees of North Carolina have revived their famous Indian Fair, after being suspended for four years because of war. It is being held the first week in October.

Many of the other tribes are now reviving their annual powwows for the first time since war restrictions. The great intertribal ceremonials at Gallup, N. M., were held in late August. The American Indian Exposition was held at Anadarko, Okla., also during the latter part of August.

oOo

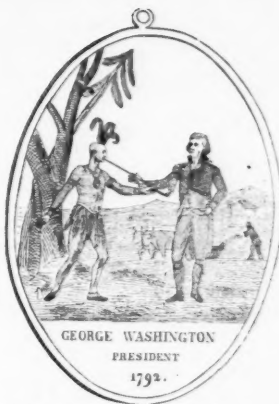

According to a release from Peru, an exchange of art objects and rare works of Indian handicraft for exhibition purposes has been arranged between the Art Institute of Chicago and the Archaeological Museum of Peru.

By agreement the Art Institute will ship a collection of American Indian articles to Lima and, in return, the Peruvian museum will send some of its finest Inca objects to Chicago.

All research workers speak of the highly developed civilization which the Incas achieved on the east coast of South America. The capital city, Cuzco, is one of the most interesting archaeological attractions in Latin America.

The tragic decline of these people who probably reached their zenith around 1500 began when Pizarro, bloody Spanish adventurer, reached the land of the Incas in about 1533. He destroyed and plundered and captured Peru with less than 200 men.

It will be recalled that Atahualpa, the Inca king, was brutally murdered after he presented a fortune in gold to Pizarro for his life.

Red Jacket's silver medal. It is pictured one-third of its original size. This illustration was shown in "Harper's New Monthly" Magazine for February, 1866.

"He-That-Keeps-Them-Awake"

By FRANK FARRINGTON

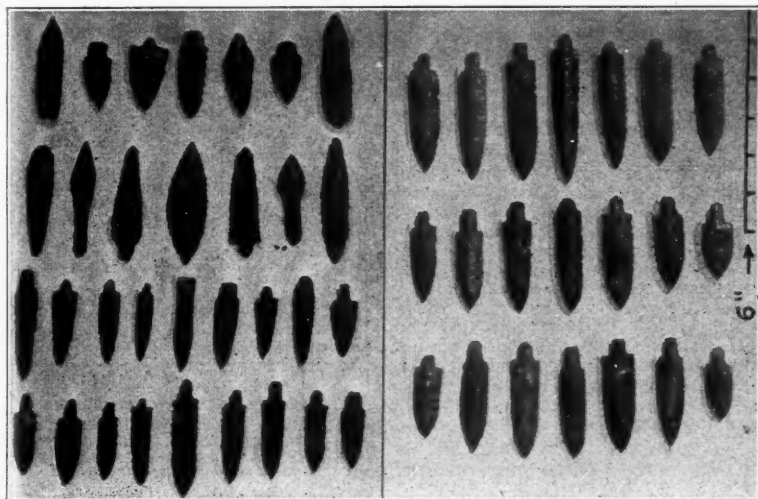

The Seneca Indian chief, Red Jacket, was originally given the name of "O-te-ti-ani," "Always Ready," but because of his oratorical ability which kept his hearers listening to his every word, he gained the later sobriquet, "Sa-go-ye-wat-ha" or "He-that-keeps-them-awake."

Had there been a "Who's Who of Native Americans" in the latter part of the 18th century, it would have listed Red Jacket among the great orators of his time, but he would not have been named as an outstanding warrior. His prowess was of the council rather than of the war-path.

The silver medal presented to him by George Washington in 1792, at the signing of the treaty of peace between the United States and the Six Nations (Mohawks, Oneidas, Tuscaroras, Onondagos, Cayugas and Senecas) was in recognition of the chief's services in promoting harmony between the Iroquois and the Washington government.

It should be explained here that the popularly used name (or nickname) of Red Jacket was given because of the famous richly embroidered scarlet jacket presented by the British for services during the Revolutionary war. This one wore out and another like it given by the British when the first one was gone, to be followed later by a third given by the United States, to maintain the tradition, in 1874 when the Indian showed his willingness to help the Americans as he had helped the British.

Red Jacket not only wore the garment with great pride but he took an equal pride in the name that went with it. However his pride and satisfaction in wearing a red coat was slight as compared with his feeling of importance upon receipt of the large silver medal placed in his hands by George Washington on the occasion of the visit of an embassy from the Six Nations.

This entirely unique medal was of pure silver upon which were engraved the figures of Washington and Red Jacket, the latter smoking the long peace-pipe, his tomahawk cast aside on the ground, while the Father of His Country appears ready to take the pipe as a friendly gesture. In the background is a rural agricultural scene with a man plowing with a yoke of oxen. The medal was oval, measuring about 5 by 6½ inches and bore, beneath the figured described above, the lettering, George Washington

President 1792. Red Jacket's figure as shown wears hung about his neck what is evidently intended to represent the medal.

To Red Jacket this medal was symbolic, the silver indicating to him the great value of the United States' friendship, the brightness of the metal suggesting the purity of the relations between the two peoples. He never sold the medal, though at times it is said he pawned it to get whisky for drunken spree which finally resulted in his deposition from the chieftain of his tribe.

At Red Jacket's death the medal changed hands various times. At one time it was on exhibition in a famous New York City jewelry store. It had several imitators, purporting to be the original, but none of them ever having been in the hands of Red Jacket.

INDIAN LORE: ANCIENT AND OTHERWISE

By WILSON STRALEY

A report from Washington states that the Creek Indians of Oklahoma are suing the federal government for 150 million dollars—funds said to be held in trust against a request for payment. The Indians state that the government refuses to distribute the funds.

oOo

"The Lost Americans," by Frank C. Hibben (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York), will prove of interest to the collector of Indian relics and to students of Indian lore.

oOo

The St. Louis Art Museum is making a search for pictures of Indians painted by Carl Wimer in the 1840s.

oOo

Says the Oskaloosa Herald: "Here's another argument in favor of giving the country back to the Indians. You never heard of them having a wigwam shortage."

oOo

According to the Kansas City (Mo.) Times: "Gum chewing is not an entirely new American practice; archaeologists claim that natives in what is now Latin America chewed the flavored latex of the sapote tree long before the days of Columbus."

oOo

Some time ago an article in Collier's stated that "Henry W. Schreiber, a prominent archer of Connecticut, reported that the Indians have always been poor archers and never could make a shot at a distance greater than ten yards." There might be something in the statement, as we recall that several years ago at a meet in Kansas City, Kas., the "whites" out-shot the "red"—not only that, but the Indians had to call on the Boy Scouts to erect the tepees furnished by the entertainment committee.

oOo

Many of the early travelers along the upper Missouri speak of the Indian farms. Most of these farms were of about two or three acres, but as the tools were antler horn rakes, bone hoes and the like, they could not be large. Besides corn, wheat, beans, pumpkin, squashes and melons, the Indians grew a kind of tobacco with which they filled the peace pipe in councils with the whites.—Will Chamberlain in Yankton Public Opinion.

—o—

We quote from "No Limits But the Sky," the published diary of Mary B. Kidder, who accompanied her husband, Dr. Alfred Kidder II, on an archaeological expedition to Peru in 1937; viz.: "Cuzco, Tuesday, August 10. Spent the day 'doing the town' today. Drove first of all through several funny narrow streets to the Church of San Blas . . . Next we went down the side street to the Museo del Doble Murro which lies behind the wall of Jatunrumiyoc . . . The Museum contains a fine collection of Inca pottery, stone vessels, and ornaments. The owner had among other things, a small gold idol, two little idols carved out of green stone, and innumerable pins of bronze and silver . . . We spent the time in the Museum pawing over the collections and admiring the fine Colonial paintings which the old man had. These last were saints and martyrs, done in oils on copper squares or oblongs. . . ."

The Picture POST CARD

Two Disabled Vets Take Over the Post Card Club

Lieutenant C. Ray Mitchell and Corporal Robert H. Miller, Kansas City boys, both disabled veterans of World War II, started their postwar careers last month by taking over the Post Card Collectors' Club of America. This growing hobby-business was presented to them by Albert H. Wood, president of the Club, who in business life is manager of the commercial department of Kansas City Public Service Co., the local transit system.

Wood started the club 12 years ago as a hobby when he began receiving letters from all over the country addressed to "Public Service, Kansas City, Mo.," asking for post card views of the city, the writers evidently believing that "Public Service" was an agency for such distribution. Correspondence increased to such proportions that a club was organized. Now the Club has more than 1,400 members in the United States and several foreign countries. It has outgrown the time that Wood was able to give to it, so two months ago the search began, through veterans' organizations, the Chamber of Commerce and local newspapers, for a disabled veteran to take it over.

C. Ray Mitchell, the new president of the club, is 24 years old and was formerly a lieutenant in the Army. He was injured in a land mine explosion while storming a hill in Italy two years ago and is paralyzed from the waist down. Just a week prior to his injury he was awarded the Silver Star for bravery in action.

Reconciled to the fact that he will spend the rest of his life in a wheel chair, he began to think about an early ambition to be a journalist. He sent an inquiry to the University of Kansas City asking about their correspondence courses on the subject. He was immediately interested in the club when he found it published news of the club doings and articles of interest to members. He asked if he might invite a friend, Robert H. Miller to help him. Corporal Miller, also paralyzed from the waist down, was struck by a German bullet which smashed through his back as he fought on the Normandy beach-head on D-Day.

In their wheel chairs, the boys moved up to a table in Mitchell's living room and listened while Al Wood explained what their duties in the management of the club would be.

Already, the boys plan to enlarge the club's scope so they will be able to hire other boys who have been handicapped by the war. Included in the expansion would be a library of information on the history of post cards and the development of the post card industry. Also, plans for establishing monetary values for post cards such as now prevail for postage stamps are being considered.

At present, they are handling the club's business from Mitchell's home in Kansas City, but they have an architect's drawing for a building which they hope will some day house the Post Card Collectors Club—not only of America—but the world.

Shouldn't Do That

Iowa—I let my subscription expire and find I miss it more than any of my magazines.—Mrs. Florence Uptegrove.

We Keep Putting A Few On The List

Montana—I am enclosing check to cover one year's subscription should I be fortunate enough at this time to get on your mailing list. I had been getting the only HOBBIES magazine that was left at a newsstand in Lewistown, Mont. I realize the position you are in at this time, and if you are able to put me on your mailing list, should a cancellation occur, I will wait my turn. I enjoy the Publisher's Page very much, in addition to the rest of the magazine. Perhaps when paper and help are normal, we will see your magazine more widely distributed in Montana.—Minnie A. Moss.

Paper is Scarce

Oklahoma—Enclosed is my husband's check for $7.50. Please renew my subscription for two years and send me one binder. May God bless you and your staff, and provide you with paper to keep publishing.—Louise B. Kelley.

She a Hobby Bird

Illinois—HOBBIES magazine and the pursuit of my hobbies give me more pleasure than anything else. I can't get along without HOBBIES and hobbies.—Josie Hitch.

They Circulated Around

Pennsylvania—When I am through with the issues I send them to the local library, where the copies circulate, then I get them back for my button collecting hobby.—Grace M. Raub.

Much of Many Things

Ohio—I enjoy HOBBIES very much and would not want to be without it. There is so much of interest in it along so many lines.—Mary R. Glessner.

Sold the Goods

Kentucky—I can not be too loud in my praise of your magazine, and have gotten some very good results from my ad.—Grace Holbrook.

Business and Pleasure

Kentucky—HOBBIES has not only helped me to build up a wonderful business, but has made some charming friends for me as well.—Frances Stiles.

Takes Place of All

Indiana—Enclosed please find check for advertising in HOBBIES, which is the only magazine for me. I have turned down the magazines which we used to take for HOBBIES. We enjoy it so much and wait for it each month.—Mrs. H. B. Yewell.

Buying Medium

Washington, D. C.—I've bought quite a few things through the HOBBIES ads and meet through mail a nice lot of people. I always look forward to HOBBIES coming.—Mrs. H. J. Welsh.

Covers U. S. Like Dew

New York—I don't think any other advertising could have brought me such wonderful results as HOBBIES did locally as well as all over the U. S. A. Thanks a million.—N. F. Ciliberti.

Wide Appeal

Connecticut—It's perfectly amazing to me to realize the scope of HOBBIES appeal.—Christine G. Messer.

Got A Collection for a Few Dimes

Massachusetts—Thought you might like to know that my advertisement asking for mustache cups in two recent issues has already enabled me to build up a collection of over 125 pieces, from all parts of the country.—William Guild.

That's Something

Kentucky—I want you to know I have never enjoyed a magazine as much as this one.—Pauline A. Burchett.

It's Tops

Illinois—Please find enclosed check for $5.00 for another two years of the very best reading. To me your magazine is tops.—Rena Franks.

Brought Customers

New York—Your magazine has been a very good medium for me and given me some very nice steady customers.—Norma Terhune.

Best for the Money

Iowa—HOBBIES is the best magazine for the money I have ever read, and I could not get along without it. I like the Publisher's Page. Keep up the good work.—Mrs. Walter Peck.

Help In Business

California—Enclosed find $5 for two years renewal. Would also like to tell you at this time that I find HOBBIES a great help in my business and personally I enjoy it very much.—Norma Cunningham.

A Spell-binder

Vermont—Your magazine is completely fascinating and I am enclosing my subscription.—Mrs. Henry C. Culver.

Makes Her Relax

Virginia—I find no reading matter as thoroughly relaxing as your valued magazine.—Thomas Corcoran.

Test Proved Best

South Dakota — My ad in HOBBIES brought such good results, I would like to run another in your next issue if you can make room for me.—Claire C. Tatman.

Looking Forward

Massachusetts—Certainly I do not want to lose one issue of your magazine. Every month I have looked forward to the time when it arrived with a feeling of anticipation of pleasure to come. There is always so much of interest to anyone who has a hobby.—Mrs. H. J. Lally.

Family Enjoyment

New Jersey—Once more please find enclosed $5.00 for another two years subscription for HOBBIES, the magazine most enjoyed by our family.—Mrs. Parker A. Wheeler.

No Slump With Hob.

Missouri—Thank you for our nice mail order business, even during the summer "slump."—Stella Shreve.

A "Few" Answers

Rhode Island—I think your magazine the best of its kind. Even that little ad I ran brought in a tremendous response.—Geo. A. Sidden.

No Time for Others

Illinois—Don't let me miss one single copy of HOBBIES. It is about the only magazine I have time to read. Good luck and good going.—Grace Renner.

Hectic is Right

New Jersey—HOBBIES means a great deal to me in these hectic times.—Margaret L. Rogers.

Likes Baby Thumbprint

California—While very new in this collecting hobby, I find that along with hundreds of others, I would be obliged to discontinue other subscriptions many times over, before I could dispense with HOBBIES, now that I've found it! Mr. Lightner's editorials are a joy to me—keep them up. It may often seem like "the voice of one crying in the wilderness," but his courage in expressing his opinions is catching. We need a rebirth of American fundamentals. Wish you'd find some authority to give us an article soon on Baby Thumbprint. It's seemingly very rare on the Pacific Coast.—Mildred P. Lyman.

Dean of Hobbyists

Wyoming—There has never been a man in our country's history who has done so much for people with a hobby as Mr. Lightner has. He has brought happiness into the lives of not one—not hundreds—but thousands. The hobby world owes a debt to him and his great magazine that it can never repay. Good luck! Keep the good work going.—Virgil Y. Russell.

You Mean 29c

Indiana—Apropos the Roosevelt' stamp collection in Hobbies the metropolitan dailies, stamp magazines, etc., why don't you take a week off for a trip to Ft. Knox and check up the gold that is supposed to back up our 49 cent dollar. After a check up, do you suppose we could still get 49 cents?—Roscoe A. Huff.

Too Many Orders

Arizona—Will you please stop our ad in your magazine, HOBBIES, as we must have a breathing spell of two or three months to catch up on all orders. We are just getting too many orders—we must halt our advertising for the time being as we do not wish to disappoint anybody.—Inscription House, Cecil Richardson.

They're From Missouri

Missouri—I surely cannot get along without HOBBIES. We are collectors and enjoy every page. We especially like Mr. Lightner's editorials. Keep them coming. We are 10% behind you.—Mr. and Mrs. Earl H. Gardner.

A Returning G. I.

Pennsylvania—Have just started to read HOBBIES again after several years with the Signal Corps. Your magazine is like a breath of fresh air compared to the dry Army training manuals. The recent issue illustrates more than ever your wonderful medium for bringing together buyers and sellers. Furthermore, collectors—no matter what their field—are bound to find an informative article which will interest them. Congratulations on a wonderful publication. Returning GIs are all very enthusiastic about it.—Robert L. Spear.

YOUTH MUST BE SERVED

By JOSEPH H. GRAY

This is a young man's world. You will never have doubt of that once you meet up with Frederick W. Hosbach, a young fellow in his early eighties, who has more pep and vitality than the majority of our juvenile generation.

Mr. Hosbach has for years been a top notcher in the field of miniature production. Way back somewhere he was a key man in the wood working industry, which in time naturally developed into his hobby. From endeavoring to see how perfect a piece of lathe work might be made is just a short step to wondering how small that same product could be turned. I doubt very much if the gentleman in question has really decided that he has accomplished the ultimate in that matter of minuteness. However, he has pretty nearly satisfied his friends that if smaller and finer things are produced they will be a Hosbach product.

Today all of his spare time is given to his workshop producing marvels that would try the eyes and nerves of a chap one quarter of his age. His media of manufacture are many kinds of rare and exotic woods, ivory, gold and silver. His finished product, is the answer to a collector's prayer.

Wee goblets and chalices so tiny that you had better trim your nails before you pick them up or the object is apt to get lost beneath the skin. There are ivory Christmas trees an inch in height with layers turned so thin you could split a hair with them.

Here is a little castor set, also of ivory with four ivory condiment bottles, with removable ebony stoppers, the whole thing barely an inch in height but of such delicate texture that you hesitate to pick it up. These things are of the substance of moonbeams.

Of a three-piece set of covered sauce pans in ivory with ebony handles the smallest pan is about a quarter-inch in diameter. For the bell collector a quarter-inch bell with the clapper hung with a human hair. Do you enjoy gathering walking sticks as an avocation? Then these delicate little pieces of ivory, snakewood, have gold handles or knobs, some are ebony and other unusual woods will bring a gleam to your eye. Some of natural wood and here is one whose concealed sword has a needle point. This tiny one-inch ebony stick with delicate gold knob must be handled carefully to avoid a fracture.

Button collectors stare with envy at the tiny buttons of ivory and plastic, with diameters as small as a sixteenth of an inch but each of which has four microscopic holes bored in its center.

There is tiny furniture, too, with tables seven-sixteenths of an inch in height, in wood and ivory and little chairs to match of an artistry almost unbelievable. Imagine the rounds and spindles on these chairs turned to the consistency of a hair and each encased in the minute hole bored to accommodate it.

Here is a spinning wheel of wood whose spokes and other parts are turned to threadlike thickness. He has its mate in the Smithsonian Institution along with other items of his work. Here also is a tiny lamp made of ivory and with a tulip wood shade turned so thin it is transparent. The little grain of wheat bulb is lighted by means of a battery concealed in the table on which the lamp sets.

A little fountain pen five-eighths of an inch long has a cap that will fit on either end and is trimmed with gold bands and has a gold pen. There is also a desk set of pen and holder that is very beautiful. Tiny perfume bottles of ivory with gold inlay and a coffee set of ivory on an ebony tray inlaid with gold greet the eye.

He has a checker board one-half-inch square with the alternate spaces inlaid in ivory and ebony and the tiny checkers almost microscopic to match.

One of his pet items is a little billiard table with tiny red and white balls and cues that are made of several pieces of wood all dovetailed as are the big ones.

There are so many wonders that come out of his work shop it would take days to describe them and then you could not visualize their delicacy and beauty.

You may have seen a picture in HOBBIES a year or two ago showing a complete ivory table service made by this artist but there are so many wonders that you did not hear about that another article is needed to bring the story up to date.

It is unlikely that there is another person in the country today who can equal Mr. Hoshbach in this delicate turning, regardless of age, and as long as this young fellow doesn't run out of ideas there is no limit to the marvels he can turn out.

FAMOUS NAMES

The curiosity of Robley D. Stevens, Maryland, to meet the great and near-great started him on a 13 years period of tracking down celebrities for their autographs. By using "Who's Who" and "Biographical Encyclopedia of the World" as his source of obtaining the home addresses of world-famous persons, he is now listed in both of these national publications for his own achievements.

The Baltimore Sunday Sun Magazine recently told its half-million readers in a full-page article about autograph collecting as a hobby and Mr. Stevens' important contribution to this field. Radio Stations WBAL and WFBR of Baltimore and, KYW of Philadelphia interviewed him as a guest speaker.

Such publicity reflects a heightened interest in autograph collecting as an absorbing hobby.

Mr. Stevens, a non-professional-collector of autographed letters and pictures of names that shine with dazzling brilliance, not only in Hollywood, but also in the arts, letters, on sport and radio pages, in the opera, theater, pulpit, in industry as well as leaders of governments of the world, including Kings, Presidents and even Dictators on up to the Supreme Court of the United States—more than 10,000—has donated the collection to the Library of Congress in Washington. He has also given a sizeable group to the Museum of Hobbies, Chicago.

In reading the various letters the great and near-great have written to him, often it seems like a series of gleanings from the textbooks of literature and history. The quality of Mr. Stevens' enthusiasm seldom varies. He was always "pleased," or it was his "good fortune," or his "privilege" to obtain this or that autograph.

The collecting of autographed pictures and letters is one hobby that we all can readily understand. There will always be souvenir hunters in quest of relics of great events, be they literary or historic, and the hobbyist is motivated by no mercenary consideration whatsoever.

When the novice starts to collect, Mr. Stevens truly believes that a gorgeous panorama of great personages awaits him. The collector must seek them out because a feast of rare dishes awaits him.—L. V.

MINERALOGICAL THOUGHTS

By W. SCOTT LEWIS

Cobalt Silver

One day a prospector sat down to rest and leaned against a rock so as to be comfortable, but the rock pricked his back so he investigated and found it bristling with tiny spikes of pure silver. As a result a great silver mine was developed. We refer to the town of Cobalt, Canada.

We have specimens that came from the mine about 1905. There are two different kinds of ore, although they grade into each other so it is not possible to draw any hard and fast line. Some of the specimens appear to the eye to consist of nearly pure smaltite (arsenical cobalt) although there are often specks of niccolite (arsenical nickel). Actually these pieces are very heavy with silver so this was considered a high grade of ore. We had a piece of this material polished and it was handsome, but perhaps we were lucky in picking just the right piece. Some of you might like to experiment along that line, however.

The other type of ore also shows plenty of smaltite, but there is so much native silver present that it can be felt as sharp points while a glass shows it plainly.

We don't need to tell you that ore like this is expensive. A pile that cost us $150 is so small that we can hardly fall down over it in the dark.

This Makes the Fire Fly

A number of dealers advertised, not so long ago, a triboluminescent "sphalerite" which is also fluorescent. This comes down across the border and the exact locality seems to be a secret for some reason. (We can think of several possible ones.) The price is rather high but the material is so interesting that we laid in a stock. We bought it before we knew there was any secret about the locality but we shall be able to give it close enough to satisfy the average collector.

We think the name under which this material is being sold is misleading. There is sphalerite there all right but we believe the fluorescence and triboluminescence are entirely due to the presence of wurtzite, a rare zinc sulphide. Probably the correct mineral name is schalenblende, which is defined as a massive form of wurtzite. Dana says, "Many schalenblendes are mixtures of sphalerite and wurtzite," and that seems to apply exactly to this material.

The characteristic of this schalenblende that makes it most attractive to the collector is its great triboluminescence. We are certainly running into a lot of long words this time, but this last one merely means that it gives off light when scratched. All you need is a nail. We realize that nails are not so easy to get right now but perhaps you can pull one out of the house when the landlord isn't looking, and if you are too honest to descend to such a trick, you can even use a finger nail. Try it at night in a dark room and you will find that you can get flashes of light by scratching a specimen with a thumb nail.

The orange fluorescence is very distinct with our mineral light and it can also be seen nicely with the various black bulbs of the hot type. Even the little argon sometimes shows it dimly, especially if the room is very dark.

Rahj al Ghar

Some minerals have been known since the most ancient times and among them is the brilliant red sulfide of arsenic which the Arabs called "rahj al ghar," the "powder of the mine." This name has now become shortened to "realgar."

The true home of realgar seems to be deep down in the earth as it is one of the minerals that is brought up by hot water and volcanic gasses. Some hot springs and geysers deposit films of it and it is to be looked for as a coating on rocks in volcanic craters. It occurs at times along with gold, silver and lead ores and stibnite is a fairly common associate of it.

When realgar is mixed with salt-peter and burned, it gives a very brilliant white light and so it is of value for fireworks and signals. However it is usually not found in any quantity in a pure form and it is made synthetically for commercial purposes.

The White Caps Mine at Manhattan, Nev., has supplied most of the realgar found in collections in this country, but unfortunately this mine is a "has been" as it is now flooded and abandoned. As a result good realgar and orpiment will both become very hard to obtain and prices will almost certainly increase.

This material is of great interest to students because it illustrates the way in which vapors and hot water can penetrate what appears to be practically solid rock. No matter where we break a piece, we find the red color appearing, and where there is a slight fracture, coatings of the pure mineral occur.

Specimens of this rock should not be put where the sun can strike them as bright light causes the realgar to alter to orpiment. However, slight films of orpiment can be scrubbed off under a tap with a stiff brush.

Passing Scene

"They who would bring back the wealth of the Indies, must take the wealth of the Indies with them." Thus reads the cryptic inscription over the Union Station in Washington, D.C. No doubt this line must have caused wonderment in the minds of many and probably never more so than today when so many are passing through the portals of this great terminal on their way to distant lands in the service of their country.

But, if it is possible to frame a judgment from the words of those boys who once worked in the Mineral Laboratory and are now abroad in our Armed Services, they have realized to their satisfaction and encouragement the full force of this cryptic inscription, though it is doubtful if most of them ever saw it.

One letter from inside the Siegfried Line reads, "Some twelve hundred feet below me, a river meanders between the mountains; the valleys are narrow, the hills are very steep—proving, according to your talks at the Bronx River, that this river is in its 'childhood' stage."

From Anzio, a medical corpsman writes to tell of his good fortune in seeing Vesuvius during a recent eruption, and of a visit to Solfatara where the poisonous gases filled the air.

Another of the boys, at an airfield in North Africa, tells of a furlough spent with a buddy on a visit to an abandoned mine high in the mountains where he collected specimens that identified it as a lead mine. Further investigation of the debris satisfied him it was worked recently, for the residue showed the ore was treated by very modern methods. The same boy was able to buy in Algeria specimens exactly like the one he had long seen exhibited in the Mineral Laboratory (Brooklyn Children's Museum).

Thus, the Mineral Laboratory, having furnished them the wealth, in the form of ability to see and to enjoy their surroundings, has given them a means of making the "wealth of the Indies" truly their own. As a result, they have a life line extending all the way back to their former haunts and habits. And as one boy put it, "Not even a war is sufficient to engage all one's energies." Fortunate indeed are those who have had such opportunities to learn to apprehend—to realize in their own experience the significance of the commonplace, for they possess a wealth that cannot be destroyed. —J. Claudius Boyle, in the bulletin of the Brooklyn Children's Museum.

Peridot—Gem of the Sun—is the alternate birthstone for August.

Peridot is the French name for Chrysolite which translated from the Greek means golden gem. It was named "gem of the sun" by its ancient admirers because it was believed to dispel the terrors of darkness.

Peridots vary from yellow to green. Most people prefer the soft green which seems to lose its yellow undertone by night. It is extremely tough and contains few flaws.

Periodical Collection Goes to Cleveland Library

The Cleveland Public Library became one of the richest sources of information on the early years of the automobile industry on August 12 when James A. Bohannon, president of Brewing Corporation of America which he established on the foundations of the old Peerless Motor Car Corporation, presented the priceless Peerless collection of early automotive literature to the Cleveland institution.

The 770 volume collection, dating back to 1896 when "Horseless Age" (now "Motor Age") made its bow as the world's first automobile magazine, is said to contain one of the most complete existing chronicles of the industry's early years. Until 1932, when Mr. Bohannon put Peerless in the brewing business and its library in storage, automotive engineers from all parts of the world had visited Cleveland for the sole purpose of research in this library.

Actual transfer of the collection to the Cleveland Public Library followed an inspection of the books at the brewery by Clarence S. Metcalf, director of the Cleveland Public Library; John H. Rohrich, president of the library trustees; Miss Rose Vormelker and Miss Mildred Stewart, respective heads of the Library's Business Information Bureau and Technical Division; and John R. Cox, chairman of the Cleveland Section, Society of Automotive Engineers.

"It has long been my feeling that the one proper permanent home for this collection is the Cleveland Public Library," Mr. Bohannon told the group. "As long as it remains here, it will be a reminder of Cleveland's important role in the early development of the automobile industry."

"We are grateful for the opportunity to make these books generally available at the Cleveland Library, whose collection of business and technical material makes it one of the richest industrial and commercial reference resources in the country."

Including the leading British, French and German, as well as American publications, the Peerless collection embraces 467 volume years of automotive periodicals published prior to 1920. Among them, for instance, are the only known copies of certain early issues of the British magazine "MOTOR" which have been the object of a country-wide search by important companies supplying the automotive industries. Likewise, it includes a complete file of the German magazine "Motorwagen" from 1898 through 1906.

Rose Vormelker, head of the Business Information Bureau of the Library, reports that there are only seven known copies of this publication in the country, two in the hands of government departments and five in other collections.

When he came to Peerless from the Marmon Motor Car Company of Indianapolis in 1929 as the youngest president in the automobile industry, Mr. Bohannon, himself a collector of rare books, found the library one of his great assets. It attracted the attention of more important leaders in automotive engineering than any other thing at Peerless, so he had many of the periodicals bound in the interests of their preservation. Always available to any interested persons, the books were kept under lock and key behind glass doors in the paneled library at the Peerless plant on Quincy Avenue.

Then on the eve of prohibition repeal, when the whole automobile industry was in the depression doldrums, Mr. Bohannon sold his stockholders on converting their plant— noted since 1900 as the home of quality motor cars—into a big modern brewery. The books were packed away in screw top cases and transferred to a vault-like fireproof room, well out of sight—but never out of Mr. Bohannon's mind.

Since then, he has received repeated requests from the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, from various public libraries, universities and several research institutions—some asking for an opportunity to buy the collection, others soliciting it as a gift.

ALONG the TRAIL

By W. SCOTT LEWIS

Nature's Babies

Babies, whether human or animal, are delicate creatures with little ability to care for themselves in most cases, and it is interesting to see the ingenious ways in which nature protects them from the hardships of life. Sometimes there is no protection, but in such cases we usually find that the young are produced in vast numbers, the idea being that if there are enough of them, a sufficient number will survive by pure accident to perpetuate the species.

The young of most lower creatures are left to shift for themselves, so it is interesting when we find an elaborated arrangement for their protection, and we wonder why isolated instances of this character occur here and there at levels where even the simplest form of care is ordinarily absent. We have an example of this in the case of the pearly-fresh-water mussels of the family Unionidae.

The gills of the parents in this remarkable family are modified so as to form pouches which contain the eggs. When these hatch, the young do not drop out as we would expect but remain in the pouch, where they are nourished by a secretion from the parent. By the time they are ready to leave for the outer world, each little glochidium, as it is called, consists of a creature entirely without organs but provided with a bivalve shell. The valves gape open and each is provided with a strong book which points inward. Between the valves there is a little coiled thread known as a byssus.

When the tiny creature falls to the sand, it rests upon its back and unwinds the byssus which floats upward in the water. There is nothing it can do now but wait. There is food all about it but it cannot eat as it has no organs. Its future existence depends entirely upon luck. If a fish happens to swim past so as to touch the byssus, it is snared. The glochidium quickly hauls itself up and grabs a scale with its hooks and rides away looking for new adventures. The slime that covers the body of the fish nourishes it until its organs are developed, and then it drops off and fails to the sand where it lives on microscopic organisms and may ultimately attain a large size and end up as a set of pearly buttons on the reader's shirt or dress.

Such elaborate arrangements lead us to wonder how they could ever have arisen in the first place. Sometimes they can be explained by the theory of natural selection but often that is inadequate and we are forced to the conclusion that there is an intelligence back of nature that works to definite ends.

Did You Know?

Specimens of the sulfide ores should be given a good scrubbing with a stiff brush in running water now and then. This will keep them bright much longer and delay the time when they will need to be soaked in oxalic acid.

oOo

Approximately 7,000,000 persons in the United States are mentally ill, and it costs the public over $175,000,000 a year to care for them. Much of this is a small part of the price we pay for our unnatural lives and uncivilized civilization.

oOo

When discussing possible trips to the moon, people often ask if human beings can stand the high speed that would be attained. Well we are not exactly creeping right now as the earth is making about 18.5 miles per second in its journey around the sun. The answer is that speed in itself has no effect on one. It is a rapid change in either the rate or direction of motion that does the harm. When one falls off the roof of a barn, it is not the trip but the arrival that hurts.

oOo

The best paper of ancient days was not the papyrus of Egypt but the huun of the Mayas. This was later improved still further by the Toltees and renamed amatl. It was derived from the inner bark of a wild fig tree that still grows in the jungles of Honduras and is used even yet by the Sumi Indian witch doctors.

oOo

Question: What creature occupies the middle point on the scale of size between the sulphur-bottomed whale on the one hand and the protozoans on the other?

Answer: The common blow-fly. Man is a huge creature when compared with most forms of life.

Donald B. Brooks, of the National Bureau of Standards, says that a fuel made by blending ethyl alcohol, diethyl ether, acetone and butane will give 25% more power than gasoline in a properly designed engine and 5% more even in an ordinary engine. There is considerable doubt as to how long our gasoline supplies will last, so it is good to know that a search for substitutes is being pressed well in advance of actual need.

"At the Sign of the Crest"

LATHAM Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

LATHAM Coat-of-Arms

He beareth for Arms: Or, on a chief indented azure three plates. Crest: On a chapeau gules and ermine a pelican in her piety or. Motto: Sans changer.

The above description of the LATHAM Armorial Bearing, is registered in Burke's General Armory, Robson's The British Herald, and Berry's Encyclopedia of Heraldry. It is also found in American books such as Matthew's American Armory and Blue Book, the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, and others where American families are mentioned with their Coats-of-Arms.

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A gold (or) shield across the upper one-third of which is a blue (azure) band or chief. The division line between the chief and lower part of the shield is zig-zag (indented). On this chief are three silver disc-like figures called plates. The crest is a duke's cap or chapeau, red (gules) with ermine brim, upon which is a nest of baby pelicans, the mother feeding them (in her piety), all of gold (or).

The chief is one of nine so-called "honorable Ordinaries," straight-sided figures, their width one-third the width of the shield, first symbols used on shields when men wore armour as protection. The chief is considered the most important of the ordinaries, as it occupies the position on the shield as a man's head occupies on his body —the chief part of the personality. Therefore any symbols on a chief are considered of more importance than any that might be in the lower part, or base. The chief indicates rank, authority, power, and dominion.

Plates are of the "roundel" family. These are all round figures, each color having a different name and meaning. Gold roundels are bezants, or Turkish coins denoting Crusader ancestry, black are pellets, cannon balls. Plates are silver, for generosity.

The cap above the helmet is called a chapeau, or cap of maintenance, or duke's cap. It was worn by the duke in some of his offices in the court in place of his crown. It was usually red "turned up ermine," and always understood as of these colors unless otherwise described. In a Coat-of-Arms, the chapeau, as the ducal coronet, did not mean that the Coat belonged to a duke, but to some one in his service in the court. When placed above the helmet, as in this illustration, the usual six-stranded wreath of colors on the helmet is omitted.

"The pelican feeding her young adorned the altars of many of the temples of the Egyptians, and was emblematical of the duties of a parent. This symbol has often been used by the church as that of devoted and self-sacrificing charity." The mother bird plucked the feathers from her breast and fed the baby birds with the blood that dropped from the wound. She is always described as "vulning herself," or "in her piety."

Colors are representative of the personal characteristics of the original bearer, and granted only if he be worthy. Gold signifies generosity and elevation of mind; blue, loyalty and truth; silver, sincerity and peace.

The French motto "Sans changer," is translated "Without changing."

The shield as described above, and illustrated, is that of practically all the branches of the Latham family, residing in counties Worcester, Essex, Lancaster, etc., and from these branches, the American families all seem to have been descended, and in the case of Lewis of Rhode Island, and Gary of Massachusetts, the proof has been established. However, this crest is not the one usually borne by these branches, but was taken from the monument of one Nicholas Latham of Brigstock Great Park, in Church of Barnwell, St. Andrew, 1620. This crest must have been a special grant to him, as other grants are different. The crest most frequently used is an eagle rising from a child's cradle, which was registered as early as the time of Edward III. In an old Visitation of Lancaster it is stated that a child was found in an eagle's nest upon the estate, and adopted by one of the Lathams, and this was probably the origin of the crest.

Lewis Latham Gent., was the ancestor of many American families, but he was never in this country; and none of his descendants here carried the name of Latham.

He was of Elstow, county Bedford, England, and was from a branch of the Lancaster family. "The Lathams exerted a powerful influence in the county of Lancaster, and the manor which bears the family name, and in which the ancestors of Lewis Latham lived, must ever be cherished with interest by his descendants."

From the records, Lewis Latham was "bred a gentleman," and became a falconer. He was falconer to Richard Berrick, and under-falconer to Charles Prince of Wales. When the latter became Charles I., he retained his falconers, and in 1627 Latham was promoted to sergeant-falconer at L65. He died May 5th 1655, at the age of 100 years, and by his daughter Frances, had 11 grandchildren and 82 great-grandchildren. One of his kinsman wrote an article on Hawking (Falconry) for a British Encyclopedia during Lewis' lifetime, explaining the ordering and training of falcons, and the medicines used in their care. The article is dedicated to "Sir Thomas Munson, Baronet, Master of his Majesties Armory, and Master of the Hawkes to his Highness."

Frances married 4 times; 1st Lord Weston, 2nd Wm. Dungan, 3rd Jeremiah Clarke, and 4th William Vaughan. She had children by the 2nd and last husbands. After she married Jeremiah Clarke in England, they, with her 4 Dungan children, came to Rhode Island to live.

Thomas Dungan settled in Pennsylvania and became a Baptist minister. Barbara their daughter, married James Barker of R. I. All of her children married and had children.

Those who are descendants of William Dungan, her 2nd husband, can trace to Royal blood, to Edward III, and then of course to Charlemagne, Alfred the Great, William the Conqueror, and sovereigns of many countries. A William Latham came in the Mayflower, and lived in Marshfield, Mass., in 1648. He returned to England, and then died in the Bahama Islands.

Cary Latham was a resident of Cambridge, Mass., later moving to New London Conn., where he was in public life for nearly twenty years. He was Deputy to the General Court from 1664 to 1670, dying in 1685, and leaving a large estate, and a family.

A writer in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Register stated that the unusual first name, "Cary" was found in the Parish Register of Aldenham, Herts, in the following entry of baptism: "1613, Nov. Carye, ye son of Nicholas Latham ye 10th daie." And he asks the question of his readers—as to whether this could be the baptismal record of Cary Latham of Cambridge, Mass.

An answer which very few of his will ever see, and which I am making public now, is written in pencil in the copy in Newberry Library, Chicago: "Yes it is of this same Carey L. See Waters "Gleanings of England." So we saw Waters' Gleanings, and in Vol. 1 page 759, there was a note that his sister, Elizabeth Kerup, of Sunning, co. Berks, England, had died, and in her will, left him L 5.

We can not say without much searching that this Coat-of-Arms can be used by the Cary branch, but, with the exception of the crest, it can by the Lewis line.

Greetings to those of Latham descent and may these few notes instill an interest to seek more of this history.

From a Genealogy

Introductions to genealogy are sometimes very dry. Many authors stress the fact that through the many years of unceasing labor they have been surprised and disappointed at the lack of interest shown by those to whom they have written for information, and as a result their book is incomplete. I sympathize with these authors for many times it is impossible for me to complete a search, and no doubt it is largely due to someone's lack of interest. Even if you do not care, you could reply for the sake of author.

Often, introductory pages or chapters contain material of historic interest to a family—the origin of a name—sketches of ancient branches of the family, and other data, enjoyed only by the descendants.

But here is a genealogy—"Thomas Stevenson of London, England and His Descendants" by J. R. Stevenson, who has given facts of value to any studying history or families in New Jersey and southern New York.

"Every school child knows that New York was settled by the Hollanders, and the English coming by the way of Puritan New England; that Pennsylvania was bought by William Penn, a Quaker, and that a company of that sect, led by Penn, purchased East and West Jersey. What is not so well known is, that the English Quakers only settled a strip of country extending back about ten miles on each side from the Delaware River, between Trenton and Salem. On the western side of the river the rest of country was settled by Swedes, Germans, Scotch-Irish, Welsh and emigrants from New England. On the Jersey side of the Delaware the largest influx of settlers were the Dutch from New York, and the English both from Long Island (chiefly) and from New England. Mixed up with these were Swedes, Germans, with a few Scotch-Irish and Huguenots.

"Under the land-warrant system of the New Jersey colonies for the sale and disposal of lands, which were afterwards adopted by the United States Government, each settler usually preferred to live on his own farm rather than in a town; therefore, local self-government was left to the townships and counties. Under the religious toleration inaugurated by the Quakers, the Puritan found it best to leave his united town and church government behind him.

"That the mechanic arts were encouraged is disclosed in old wills of wealthy and prominent citizens, in which are clauses that because one son had been taught a trade it was considered equal to a bequest of land, from which he would be cut off."

CREST CORNER

My main purpose in writing the informal type of article month after month—yes—year after year—is to create in you readers a "yen" (shall we call it?) for delving deeper into your fascinating family history that you may realize both the benefits and good times gained. For the history of a nation is the history of its individuals.

So seldom though, do I find in current literature, other writers even mentioning the subject, that when I do, I really "take note." Now this is not current, but has come to me recently.

In the Chicago Daily News in June, 1942, Royal F. Munger in his column, "Old Bill' Suggests," wrote the following:

"Just as a suggestion to colleges and universities, students working for an M. A. or a Ph. D. in history, instead of poring laboriously over documents long since sifted by greater experts, could do a current compilation, both by study of documents and by interviews with men and women still living, on the group history of a particular family.

"A young man of talent might well begin with his own family, tracing its racial and geographic background, its arrival in the United States, its successful or unsuccessful contributions to the economic, social and political structure of the community, and its final development to the proud state of producing a student capable of writing such a record.

"An amazing amount of profitable information might be drawn from such a study. Col. J. S. Sullivan of the United States Army told us the other day, how when Senator James W. Wadsworth of New York had drawn the National Defense Act in 1920, Col. John McA. Palmer, historian of the committee, had unearthed a very similar bill, presented in 1790 with the approval of George Washington. The earlier bill had been drawn by Congressman Wadsworth of Kentucky, the Senator's granduncle, and he had never known about it until Col. Palmer came on the information.

"There is a lot of human nature in even ordinary events if they are studied properly."

BELLS

The Musical Bells of Maine

"The music of bells, which is frequently heard on the Maine coast, is something one associates with the sea quite as naturally as one does the sound of an anchor chain being run out, a rope being rove in a block, the lapping of waves along a vessel's side, or the tide washing a beach. For bells are put to a variety of marine uses. They are part of the system of buoyage. Almost all lighthouses have them. So does every ship. Docks and wharves are often equipped with them. Time is designated on shipboard by a special system of bells. And because marine bells have figured importantly in their lives, the people of the coast have never been chary of buying bells for other than marine purposes. Maritime Maine, indeed, abounds in great, middle-sized, and little bells of every kind.

"Of all these, the sound of the bell buoy is the most unearthly, perhaps, because it is not rung by any human agency, but is operated by the uncertain action of the sea. Not only the irregularity of the sound, but the general mournfulness of tone, the grave note of warning, and the utter loneliness of the thing itself tethered amid endless acres of water make it seem non-terrestrial. It is neither a part of the land nor a part of the sea, but is like a thing existing sadly in limbo. No one, I am sure, ever heard a merry or joyous bell buoy. I used to listen to it at night, and could sometimes tell from it the state of the sea and the direction of the wind.

"Lighthouse bells, which are used as warnings in thick weather, are much larger than any of the bells or gongs suspended in the skeleton superstructures above the floats of buoys, and are generally operated by clockwork and are sounded at regular intervals. Each lighthouse has its own special signal, such as a group of two strokes every twenty seconds or one stroke every ten or fifteen seconds, so that those who hear it can tell what particular bell it is and get their bearings from it"

—From "Anchor to Windward," by EDWIN VALENTINE MITCHELL. (New York: Coward-McCann)

Turkey Bell

An Iowa reader has a turkey bell in her collection which is interesting for its association as well as from the standpoint of its being a true collector's item. Yes, turkeys were once belled so that their wandering proclivities could be controlled somewhat, if not completely mastered.

Perhaps, too, the turkey was fond of the bells. At any rate this calls to mind a friend, who with her parents operated a large ranch in Wyoming. The huge drove of turkeys provided financial remuneration when other branches of the ranch's industries were going in the red. It used to be the job of the young lady of the household to herd the turkey flock. She would set forth in the morning with her sandwich, thermos bottle of milk, and guitar. At first the turkeys paid no attention to the music as she paused for relaxation by some stream on the range. Then by and by, she said, some of the older members of her flock would draw near. She insisted that they learned to like the music. Her parents told her it was the homing instinct that got them onto their roosts in the evening when she brought her large flock home, but the young lady always believed that it was her guitar playing that caused them to mount their roosts faster at the end of the day.

A Reporter's Version:

"Better Than a Drink"

A newspaper reporter had this to say about the hobby of bell collecting. (Whether or not you agree in all points, you will agree that the gift buyer had good taste).

"One of the tasks of the buyer for a department store gift shop is to cater to the tastes of hobbyists and collectors of odd objects. One such hobby is collecting bells of various kinds.

"....., gift buyer, for a local department store did not know about this particular mania until she read of it in a hobby magazine. Scenting a new retail field, she found a New York collector with a lot of bells he was willing to part with. They were on display yesterday on the fifth floor of the store.

"About half of the 500 or so pieces are marked 'Greece,' which seems to be the center of the bell industry. There are bells for sheep, horses, goats, elephants, camels, cows and even monkeys. Herdsmen use the bells to help find their flocks on wooded hillsides and unfenced pasture lands.

"The rough, hand-forged Greek cowbells have the dull and doleful tone associated with cows, even the contented variety, the world over. The goat bells, hung on strings, are harsh and unmusical. The sheep bells tinkle merrily.

"The gift buyer does not know what makes people collect bells, but with one of her customers it is a matter of what the psychologists call sublimation. Every time he feels like taking a drink, he rushes in to buy a bell."

Belled Cat

The smallest bell ever noted by an observer of this department is one that adorns the neck of a miniature black cat that she owns. The cat is truly belled and the tone of the miniature bell is a delicate tinkle. This tiny specimen would delight either the collector of miniaturia or bells.

Seals and Sealing-Wax

By THEODORE RHINEAR

A seal may be defined as an impression on wax or other soft substance made from a die or matrix of metal, a gem, or some other material. The stamp which yields the impression is sometimes itself called the seal. In Egypt, seals were in use at an early period, the matrix generally forming part of a ring. A great variety of devices were used in Rome, both by the earlier emperors and private individuals. The emperors after the time of Constantine, introduced "bullae" or leaden seals, and their use was continued after the fall of the Western Empire by the popes, who attached them to documents by cords or bands.

On the earlier papal seals are monograms of the pope; afterwards the great seal contained the name of the pope in full, and a cross between the heads of St. Peter and St. Paul, while the papal privy seal, impressed not on lead but on wax, known as the "Seal of the Fisherman," represented St. Peter fishing. In the 9th and 10th centuries we find Charlemagne, the Byzantine emperors, and the Venetian doges, occasionally sealing with gold, and we have an instance as late as the 16th century of a gold seal appended to the treaty of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, between Henry VIII of England and Francis I. of France.

Sealing-wax as now used is a composition of hard resinous materials used for receiving and retaining the impressions of seals. Simple as it may appear, its manufacture was one of great importance prior to the invention of gummed envelopes, which to a great extent have superseded the wax seal on private correspondence. Common beeswax was first used in Great Britain and in Europe generally, being mixed with earthy materials to give it consistency. Nevertheless, it was difficult to preserve it, as a very small amount of heat softened it.

The Venetians, however, brought the Indian sealing-wax to Europe, and the Spaniards received it from the Venetians, and made it a very important branch of their commerce. The great value of the Indian wax consisted in the fact that it was made only of shellac, covered with vermilion or some other pigment, and this has been found superior to all other materials. In addition to the shellac and coloring material, there is always added to the wax made in Europe a portion of Venetian turpentine and some resin.

"The earliest application of this Venetian sealing-wax to its present purpose appears to have been made about the year 1553. The first printed account of it, according to Berzelius, appeared in 1563. The oldest known impression of a seal upon ordinary sealing-wax is that found by M. Roos on a letter written from London, August 3, 1554, to the Rheingrave Phillip Francis von Daun by his agent in England, Herr Gerrard Mann. The color is dark red, it is very shining, and the impression bears the writer's initials." (Beekman).

In the archives of Mulhausen in Thuringia there are a number of celebrated documents bearing the seals of celebrities; one of these dated 1548, has a wax seal with the arms of Charles V, and another dated 1526, bears the seal of Luther impressed on red wax, this would seem to indicate that sealing-wax was known in Germany before it came into use in England. The fact that Beekman's first example was written by the agent of a German count would prove that the custom of using Venetian wax came to England from Germany, where it was perhaps introduced by the Spanish Hapsburgs.

Buffalo Bill Memorial

The 100th anniversary of Buffalo Bill (William Cody) was observed during the latter part of July in Denver, Colo.

Subscriber Will H. Shelper of Bloomington, Ill., who attended spoke of the splendid attendance at the Colorado State Museum in honor of the occasion.

Through a recent gift the Colorado State Museum has a number of Buffalo Bill trophies in its collection. Many of the store windows in Denver were decorated for the anniversary with relics from the collection of George E. Cartwright.

The Denver Stamp Club mailed out more than 11,000 cachets in honor of the occasion.

Britons Releasing Heirlooms For Yank Money

"Ships as stuffed with treasure as Spanish galleons today are plying the Atlantic," writes Gwen Morgan, Chicago Tribune Press Service correspondent from London.

According to correspondent Morgan, they carry paintings, old books, silver, furniture, tapestries and ancient armour—collected riches of the empire which the British are exchanging at record prices for United States dollars. Morgan says further:

"According to the board of trade, $3,000,000 worth of curios alone went to the United States in the first six months of this year. The total is more than four times the figure for 1938.

"Even the 1938 figure was abnormally high. Many Britons then were shipping out old grandeur to escape going down with England, which they considered a sinking ship. So many were building up fortunes abroad in this way that the government had to tighten export restrictions. The restrictions still hold but exporters have no trouble getting licenses so long as the government is sure Britain gains the proper dollar credits.

"Paintings sold for some $6,000, 000 have been shipped to the United States this year, and London dealers have standing orders with no limit on the number and price.

"One American alone recently bought 10,000 paintings. Decorative painting and students' copies of old masters bring from $20 to $2,000, with genuine old masters running in six figures. One Constable recently brought $180,000.

"Christie's and Sotheby's, London's main art auction houses, are doing the biggest business of their history. Both conduct a daily two hour sale. The 10 per cent commission runs as high as $50,000 per sale.

"Old books are leaving England by the ton. D. A. S. W. Rosenbach of Philadelphia, Pa., is a fabled buyer. Altho he is sometimes criticized for robbing Britain of one of her heritages as a result of the pre-war purchase of the original manuscript of 'Alice in Wonderland' for $75,000, Sotheby's is still sending him books in $100,000 lots. Recently he purchased for $4,400 the William Blake drawing of Samson which was sold in 1914 for $88.

"Rich Britons are culling inherited collections at their great houses. War rich Britons are buying as a hedge against inflation.

"Relics of ancient wars—armor, pistols and sabers—are in great demand. Americans are buying most of the pistols. Armor is going to South Africa and other colonies suddenly enriched by a war which reversed the flow of money within the empire."

Our "American Dresden Bric-a-brac" line of Min. Perfume Bottles

We call this line thus, because, Dresden Bric-a-brac gave our artists their inspiration. We handled this line for about two years after the war began, then had to discontinue it, because of lack of labor and material. We have just reorganized our shop, have some of the old artists back, some new ones in addition, and are now turning out as fine a line of spic and span merchandise, as we did then. The bottles are blown glass, the decorations are tiny sea shells, hand-painted and affixed by artists of rare taste. The shells are put on with our own secret formula of cement, and guaranteed not to come off.

The designs are of highest artistic order, and the colors most exquisite. The main characteristics of this line are,

Daintiness, Refinement, Elegance, Culture

Miniature Wall Decorations under convex glass

Exquisitely charming! Alluringly fascinating! Delightfully enchanting!

As a customer expressed herself, seeing the entire exhibition in our sample room:

"THEY SEEM LIKE A MELODY, A POEM, A DREAM OF BEAUTY."

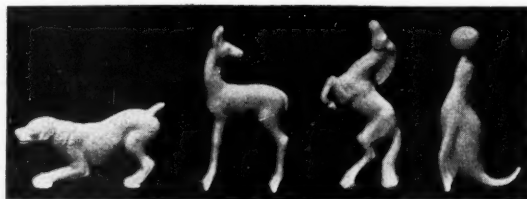

We have a large variety, ranging in size from 3" in diam. to 7" in diam, some come with realistic reproductions, of the Great Masters, reproduced in exact colors as the orig., others come with real preserved tropical flower arrangements, all under convex glass, and the convex glass not only gives these miniature wall decorations a distinguished look, but actually shows the pictures in a better perspective, than ordinary glass would. They retail from 50 cents to $1.50, and the selection of subjects and floral designs is tremendous.

A FULLY ILLUSTRATED PRICELIST WILL BE SENT TO ANY GIFT SHOP ON REQUEST.

Miniature Plastic Animals Works of art in every detail

IN THREE COLOR, WHITE, CORAL AND BLUE. EIGHT DIFFERENT DESIGNS.

4775 G.

The great quality of plastic is, that it is almost unbreakable, and will stand any amount of moisture, without losing color or the outline of its beautiful designs. Therefore florists can use them for the soil of flowerpots, candy stores can tie them to candy packages, as the price is very low, so low in fact, that they can be given away. Price quoted to any storekeeper on request. The eight subjects come in three colors each, therefore you really get 24 different designs.

We do a wholesale business only and do not sell nor do we quote prices to collectors or private parties of any kind. Private parties desiring our goods, kindly take this ad, to your nearest GIFT SHOP, and we are sure you will be able to obtain whatever desired.

WE carry a tremendous line of GIFT GOODS, retailing from 10 cents to $25.00. Fully illustrated pricelists will be sent any GIFT SHOP on request.
